

Gaffney Choral Society, G-W Choir To Give Messiah In Gaffney Sunday

The Gaffney Choral Society will present its third annual performance of Handel's famous oratorio the Messiah, Sunday afternoon, December 10, in the Gaffney high school auditorium, at 5 o'clock. The group will join forces with the Gardner-Webb A Cappella Choir to form a chorus of approximately 75 voices.

known soprano from Shelby, N. C., who has appeared several times before in concerts given by the Society.

New to Gaffney audiences will be Mary Mills Dyer, Contralto, head of the voice department at Gardner-Webb college; also the Rev. John Gosord, tenor, and the Rev. Howard Chadwick, bass, of Winston-Salem, N. C.

Accompaniment for the concert will be furnished by Miss Rachel Pierce, professor of organ at Converse college, and the Spartanburg String Ensemble, comprised of Peggy Gignilliat, Mrs. B. B. Poliakoff, Alphonse Cavallaro and Hughes Green, violins; Miss

Lees-McRae Cagers At G-W Saturday

Boiling Springs — Gardner-Webb, winners and losers of one each during the first week of play, will tangle with the Lees-McRae College Bobcats Saturday night at 8 p. m. at college gym here.

Last Wednesday night G-W was trimmed by Cramerton's Eagles 60-42, and then Saturday, the Wayne Bradburn-coached five smashed Lenoir-Rhyne's Jayvees 63-46. Pete Rollins, star center from Greenville, canned 27 points in the first two tilts to top the scorers. J. C. Trammell, Lucille Tegg, violin, and Miss Florence Reynolds, cello. Trumpet parts will be played by Hayward Moore.

Losses to the boll weevil and other pests in North Carolina during the last two years totaled more than $785 per cotton farm, reports the National Cotton Council.

The MYF Pageant Well Attended

The MYF pageant, "The Nativity," at Central Methodist church Sunday night was attended by a large number. Lighted candles in pine branches interspersed with Christmas tree balls were arranged in the windows and on the piano in the sanctuary. Large evergreen trees on either side of the pulpit in front of a white curtain formed the setting for the shepherd scene. From the choir loft came voices of the youth choir in familiar carols, that told the Christmas story, along with readings by Ivan Weaver, who stood behind a lectern, reading by candlelight. The cast of the pageant appeared in past-tense as the story was told.

Shepherds, wearing colored robes and scarfs on their heads, carrying shepherd crooks, appeared on the scene, and an angel robed in white, with white wings and silver halo, appeared from the choir loft. Curtains were pulled following this scene, revealing the manger scene, where a light from the hay-filled manger fell upon the faces of Mary, wearing a green skirt and wine robe, with a white headpiece, and Joseph, wearing a robe and scarf. Four angels, clad in white, wearing filmy white wings bordered in silver and silver halos, came down the center aisle carrying lighted candles, and formed a semi-circle about the manger. An Innkeeper appeared, staring ahead. Bearing gifts, the three Wise Men also came down the center aisle, wearing wine robes and white headpieces. Each knelt before the manger, presenting his gift, then left in different directions. Following the manger scene, the Holy Family left, followed by angels, who removed a brown covering from the backdrop of the scene, revealing the painting, "Head of Christ," as the reader told of Christ as the Light of the World. Following the last carol, a choral benediction was given by the youth choir, robed in white. At the organ was Miss Barbara Gault.

In the pageant were: Walter Griffin, Don Bumgardner, Joe Ware, Jo Ann Hayes, Ann Mayes, Dale Dixon, Betty Prince Jane Or-
