Horn Outlines Proposed County District Set-Up

County Attorney C. C. Horn announced the tentative arrangement of county districts in a bill he is drawing to change the county government set-up.

Under the proposed change, the board of commissioners will be increased to five members, with the members to be elected from particular districts.

Mr. Horn said the tentative plan calls for the following districts:

1. Number 6 Township, 2. Number 4 and 5 Townships, 3. Number 9 and 10 Townships, 4. Number 8 and 11 Townships, 5. Number 1, 2, 3, and 7 Townships.

Mr. Horn said the proposal, as based on the 1950 unofficial census, would make each district approximately equal in population.

The districts, according to the proposed plan, would limit only a person's offering for office. Under the proposal, all citizens would have the privilege of voting for one candidate from each of the five districts.

The bill will be presented to the county board of commissioners for its approval at the February meeting. It will be introduced, as approved, in the General Assembly by the county's legislative delegation, who have indicated that they favor the proposed changes.

Defense Head Says Nation Can Be Bombed

"At any hour of any night, the Russians could wipe out any city of the United States by the atomic bomb," E. Z. Jones, North Carolina director of civil defense told an audience of 150 Kings Mountain citizens Tuesday night.

As proof of good reasoning, Mr. Jones, an army major during World War II, said army officials had told him, "No American bombing mission in World War II was stopped short of its mission by enemy action." He pointed out that this was true even though the Germans had already developed air defense to a high degree of perfection.

He also pointed out that Russia could bomb this country on a one-way flight, with bombers similar to the U. S. B-29. "The Russians could unload on any city, then bail out, and be interned for the duration at Grove Park Inn," he said.

By such statements, Mr. Jones made out a good case for the current need for a civilian defense organization throughout the state and the nation. Integrated, he said for the one major aim of civil defense: to minimize the effect of enemy action. The organization could be used in peacetime emergency, he noted, but added that this was not the primary aim.

He compared civil defense to an insurance policy. "Just because we have insurance, we don't go around wanting the house to burn down," he pointed out. "But if it does burn, that insurance proves invaluable."

The individual, he said, can do his part in civil defense in two ways, by selling the need for civil defense and by volunteering for duty.

He reported that the Mayor of Cologne, Germany, told him that that city had evacuated 240,000 persons during the heavy bombing raids of World War II. Then he asked, "Could we do it?"

He pointed out that there are four major means by which an enemy could attack the United States, by bombers, missiles, submarines, or sabotage, and he further noted that the Communists in this nation are doing everything they can to discourage civil defense.

Pfc. Bolts Wins Bronze Star

WITH THE FIRST CALVARY DIVISION IN KOREA. — A Kings Mountain soldier has been awarded the Bronze Star Medal for his conspicuous devotion to duty which contributed to the destruction of seven enemy tanks.

He is Private First Class Henry M. Bolts, son of Mrs. Lela Mae Bolts, 118 Walker street, Kings Mountain.

Private Bolts was awarded the fourth highest decoration for heroism in action September 27, 1950 at Hungnam, Korea while a member of the U. S. 1st Cavalry Division.

The citation accompanying the decoration reads in part: "Private Bolts' battery was attached to the task force making the initial breakthrough to link up with United Nations forces at Inchon when it was suddenly ambushed, shortly after midnight, by ten enemy tanks. Courageously disregarding the terrific volume of enemy tank cannon and machine gun fire directed at him, Private Bolts, as conioneer, quickly assisted in placing his 105 mm howitzer in firing position."

"The lead tank was allowed to come within a range of 25 yards before it was fired upon and destroyed, blocking the advance of the other tanks. Private Bolts' coolness under fire," the citation continued, "and conspicuous devotion to duty greatly contributed to the eventual destruction of seven enemy tanks and to preventing the overruning of the task force's column. Private Bolts' heroism reflects great credit upon himself and the military service." The citation concluded.

"When you buy a broom or mat, you get value received, provide employment for the blind and our Lions club is able to further its work with the blind," Lions President Otto Williams said.

Herald Is Winner Of Contest Award

Editorial Page Adjudged Best Among Weeklies

The Kings Mountain Herald was adjudged to have the best editorial page among weekly newspapers in North Carolina in the 1950 newspaper contests of the North Carolina Press Association.

Governor W. Kerr Scott announced and presented the awards at the annual Duke University dinner of the Mid-Winter Press Institute, held last Friday night at Durham.

The weekly newspaper contests were judged by officials of the Lee Memorial Journalism Foundation of Washington and Lee University, Lexington, Va., who based their decisions on each issue published by newspapers entering the contests during the final quarter of 1950.

In the editorial page division, the Franklin Press was adjudged second-place winner, with the Northampton County News taking third. Special mention was accorded the Marion Progress, the Valdese News and the Mt. Airy News.

In the semi-weekly contests, the Cleveland Times, of Shelby, was given special mention in local news coverage and in the editorial page divisions. Prior to the announcement of the press awards, the Herald received from the judging officials an interim report or critique, in which the Washington and Lee officials praised the editorial page as "good." "Its appearance is excellent and editorials are well-written and expressive," the critique read.

It also stated, "The paper reports news of all community activities with balance and objectivity," and noted, "The Herald regularly prints enough sports copy to fill up a regular sports page. Publication of complete statistics of high school games was excellent, as well as unusual for the weekly field."

For its award in the editorial division, the Herald received a handsome bronze plaque, with engraving noting the Herald's award.

City Has Completed Water Line Jobs

The City of Kings Mountain has completed currently approved water line projects in three areas of the city, City Administrator M. K. Fuller said this week.

The city has installed six-inch water lines in Linwood road, in the Burlington Mill village, on Cansler street and in Crescent Hill.

The installations have also included addition of nine fire hydrants, three in each area, which will improve the fire protection for those areas, Mr. Fuller said.

City crews are now busy metering houses in the Burlington section, and citizens of the area are being asked to tie in with their private lines as quickly as possible.

DAY OF PRAYER

County Board Will Send 200 Men For Army Physicals February 28

The Cleveland County selective service board has been ordered to furnish 200 men for pre-induction physical examinations on February 8.

The call is by far the heaviest yet received by the county board and is indicative of the heavily increased demand for men by the army.

Mrs. H. L. Newman, clerk to the board, said that filling of the February 8 call would virtually exhaust the board's pool of registrants in the 20-year-old age group.

Two King Street Lots Purchased By Bus Company

Queen City Coach Company has completed arrangements for the purchase of two lots in the 100-block of West King street for purported erection of a bus terminal.

Sale of the two lots, from the Maud Eunice Hord Estate and from Fred W. Plonk and Hal S. Plonk to the Queen City Company, was confirmed by the owners Tuesday.

Total cost of the property to Queen City was $15,500, the company agreeing to pay $8,000 to the Maud Eunice Hord estate for a lot 75 feet by 158 feet, and $7,500 to Fred and Hal Plonk for the adjoining lot, which is 64 feet by 158 feet.

Meeting in special session Wednesday morning, the city board of commissioners, which has been active in urging the bus company to make provisions for a suitable terminal here, unanimously approved the site for erection of a terminal.

Just how quickly Queen City will be able to utilize the property for a terminal is a question, in view of the current building freeze on commercial construction. However, Mayor J. E. Herndon, who has been in constant touch with Queen City officials for the past several months in an effort to speed action on a bus terminal site, expressed the opinion that the federal government would approve the erection of a terminal as necessary to the public welfare.

News of the purchase of the property will be welcomed by Kings Mountain area citizens who use inter-city buses for transportation. Since February 16, 1950, Kings Mountain has been a flag stop for buses. Bridges Auto Parts on West King street is a receiving station for bus express, but bus patrons have had to secure schedule information from Shelby or Gastonia terminals.

Efforts to secure a terminal site have been in the news during the past year. At request of the city board of commissioners, Utilities Commissioner Edward H. McMahan held an informal hearing on the matter here, and the city administration had anticipated seeking a Utilities Commission order requiring the bus operators to provide terminal facilities.

In talks with Mayor Herndon and others J. H. Quattlebaum, Queen City traffic manager, has indicated that his company anticipates building a bus station here comparable to one the company has recently completed at Wadesboro.

Schoolmen Cite Pupil Draft Policy

City school officials called attention this week to current selective service policy, whereby the induction of men under 20 years of age may be postponed, provided the young man is making satisfactory grades on a full course of study.

Under present policy, a young man in such circumstance may have induction postponed until he reaches the age of 20, graduates from high school or ceases to pursue satisfactorily a full-time course of instruction, whichever occurs first.

"When a full-time student under 20 years of age receives his notice of induction, Superintendent of Schools Clyde Erwin advised in the January issue of the North Carolina Public School Bulletin, "he should make written request for postponement to his local draft board. This written request should carry an endorsement from the superintendent of schools to the effect that the said student is under 20 years of age and is satisfactorily pursuing a full course."

In Cleveland County, no registrants under 20 have yet been called for induction or even pre-induction examinations. However, it is expected that call for March will include men under 20.

Principal Rowell Lane, of Kings Mountain high school, said only a few pupils of the local school would be effected by the ruling under current policy whereby 18-year-olds are not being drafted. However, he pointed out, it would effect a larger number should Congress permit the drafting of 18-year-olds, as is now being requested by the Defense Department.

Any individual who wishes to make a donation should call Mr. Stallings at Burlington Mills of office. He said he will visit the donor and pick up his gift. Funds derived from the campaign are used to treat victims of infantile paralysis and to pay for research to determine the cause of polio and improved methods of treatment.
