County Agent Has Helpful Information
John L. Lipscomb of Route 1, Blanch, has found that it is a wise idea to call on the county agent for help when trouble copy of a bulletin on bean diseases and told him to see if he could identify the disease. After thumbing through the bulletin for a few minutes, Lipscomb easily recognized the disease as curly top, according to Carraway.

The Caswell farmer left Carraway's office convinced that the county agent can be helpful.
Lipscomb visited Carraway's office recently with a handful of bean plants which was infected with a disease strange to the Caswell farmer.

Carraway handed the farmer a comes up, relates E. B. T. Carraway, Caswell County Negro farm agent for the State College Extension Service.

Increased yields from hybrid corn are enough to provide an extra 35 pounds of pork for every man, woman and child in the United States.
