Collins, at 95, Oldest Rail Engineer in U. S.

OTILL hale and hearty at 95 and enjoying to the full the fruits of his retirement, Sextus A. Collins of 55 Channing St., New London, Conn., pensioned Central Vermont Railway engineer, is not only the oldest C. V. pensioner, but is believed to be the oldest retired railroad engineer in the United States.

Collins, who takes a walk out of doors every day the weather is fine, traveled to Brattleboro, Vt., this fall to attend a Central Vermont Railway pensioners' meeting and had a "fine time" because the trip "didn't tire me at all."

The old engineer was born July 24, 1856, and went to work as a C. V. fireman in 1887. Two years later he was promoted to engineer and ran trains between New London and Brattleboro, Vt., until his retirement in 1934 at the age of 78. He says his claim as the oldest retired locomotive engineer in the United States has never been challenged.
