Over 4,300 diesel locomotives were built during 1950, almost twice as many as in the previous year. These locomotives accounted for nearly 40% of the estimated 6,500,000 pounds of nickel consumed by the railroad industry.

Nickel is distributed widely by nature but in only few localities is nickel mineralization sufficiently concentrated to constitute ore bodies.

TRAINS TO MATCH TULIPS

As a tourist attraction, the Dutch are painting their railway trains to match their tulip fields this year. But you can't match the delicious flavor of HOLSUM BREAD anywhere.
