Azalea Blooms Seen 1st Week In April

CHARLESTON. — Charleston's world-famous gardens, already ablaze with hues of scarlet, pink and lavender azaleas, have just been given a helping hand from the weatherman.

Originally, full bloom at Magnolia, Cypress and Middleton Gardens was scheduled for the last two weeks of March. But because of the perfect weather for preserving the full bloom, visitors will also be able to witness the color spectacle through the first week of April.

The garden owners are well-pleased with the weather this year. This was not the case last year, however, when a severe winter damaged the immediate bloom. The gardens made a great recovery, and today everything is completely back-to-normal.

In fact, the owners are predicting that this will be the best bloom since 1948. And even more pleasing are the visitors. This year, the number of tourists and travelers stopping at the gardens is well ahead of previous seasons.

While thousands of garden-lovers along the Atlantic seaboard annually wait for the full bloom to visit Charleston, the tours of historic houses are also attracting many visitors.

The Historic Charleston Foundation has arranged tours of 17 private homes, all of them, splendid examples of 18th century architecture.

At Magnolia Gardens, long proclaimed the world's most beautiful, vistas and vistas of massed color are thrilling visitors. Massive trees crowned with Lady Banksia and Cherokee roses cover radiant arches of azaleas.

Middleton Gardens, housing the oldest landscaped gardens in America, is over 200 years old, and features terraces sloping down to butterfly lakes, with banks of blooms on every side.

At Cypress, black waters reflect the blazing azalea colors. Boat rides through the inky fairyland of beauty are among the visitors' favorites. In addition, traditional spirituals of the Carolina lowlands are sung on Saturday and Sunday afternoons by the Gullah Negroes.

Lower Dosage Aureomycin To Save Patients Money On "Wonder Drugs"

PEARL RIVER, N. Y. — One of the antibiotic "wonder drugs," which is used widely for many human and animal diseases, is becoming less expensive for the patient. Since discovery of aureomycin in 1949, there have been several direct price reductions.

Now Lederle Laboratories is marketing the drug under a new low-dosage recommendation which is about half that for similar wide-range antibiotics, according to a company spokesman. This lower dosage will mean substantial savings for the patient.

The new recommendation calls for only four 250 mg. aureomycin capsules per day for an adult, as compared with the old recommendation of eight to 10 per day, for serious bacterial infections.

Lederle officials, "our scientists, realizing that lower dosages of the drug would be effective, set in motion an extensive research program in our laboratories and in hospitals throughout the country, to gain evidence. Meanwhile, independent reports from all over the world proved conclusively that a lower dosage is in order, a fact which has been recognized and approved by responsible authorities."

Aureomycin, which must be prescribed by a doctor, is indicated in the treatment of over 60 diseases which beset man, including "strep" throat, boils and carbuncles, "virus" pneumonia, tonsillitis, and a number of skin infections.

Money can be saved by buying fertilizer on the basis of the cost per pound of plant food rather than the cost per ton.

Farmers should use adequate quantities of recommended fertilizers to obtain profitable yields of high quality crops.

Ordinary superphosphate, a valuable fertilizing material, has been manufactured in the United States for over 100 years.

USDA estimates that fertilizer consumption in the United States by 1960 will likely double that of 1950.
