Registration Books Close Saturday For City Voting

Politicking On Increase During Week

The pace of political activity quickened perceptibly during the past week, as all candidates began their final drives for votes and victory.

But the spotlight, unquestionably, was on the three-man mayor's race which gave all prospects of becoming a torrid affair, indeed.

Mayor Garland Still stepped up his circular production to near once-a-day basis, and Candidates Glee A. Bridges and George W. Allen were knocking on doors in all parts of the city. There wasn't much unanimity among political crystal-gazers. Each of the three was being picked to finish first, last, and second high.

No additional candidates entered the field, which remained at 18 candidates for seven offices. Candidates, supporters, and observers alike thought the candidate list "all done." This meant that J. R. Davis would be unopposed for re-election as Ward 1 school trustee.

Lone two-man race in the Ward 1 commissioner between James (Red) Layton, incumbent, and W. Sage Fulton, Sr.

Three candidates seek each of the other positions. The other candidates are: Ward 2 — L. E. Davis, incumbent, Warren E. Reynolds, and J. H. Patterson.

Ward 3 — Olland R. Pearson, incumbent, T. J. (Tommy) Ellison and Clarence L. Elgin.

Ward 4 — Harold Phillips, O. T. Hayes, Sr., and Floyd Williams.

Ward 5 — W. G. Grantham, Sam Stallings and D. L. White.
