ly setting for the meeting. Several progressions of bridge were played when Mrs. Hambricht, assisted by her daughter, Jane, served a congealed salad course with a fruit drink.

Mr. And Mrs. John Davis Celebrated Golden Wedding Anniversary Saturday

One of the outstanding social gatherings of last week was the brilliant reception held in the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Davis Saturday night when they celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Pete Barkley were at the front entrance to welcome guests upon their arrival. A table holding a large basket of mixed flowers giving the effect of an old fashion garden, with a background of ferns made a pretty entrance setting.

B. T. Wright, Sr. introduced callers to the receiving line composed of the honorees, Mr. and Mrs. Davis, and their daughters, Mrs. B. T. Wright, Sr., Mrs. John Cashion, Sr. and Miss Davis.

The all white arrangements in the living room were very striking. On the piano was an arrangement of lilies-of-the-valley, sweet peas, and daisies with lighted white candles. A large oval shaped arrangement of white glads, shasta daisies and fever-few was used on the mantel with emphasis on the wedding bands. A large white satin band with two gold bands extended from the center top. A row of candles was on the upper tier of the mantel. Another interesting floral piece was of madonna and calla lilies using the large madonna foliage for the background. This was complemented with a miniature bride and groom.

Guests were directed into the hall by John Cashion. Over the door, through which they passed, was a large lacy golden bell. Here yellow glads were combined with magnolia leaves in a tall brass vase complemented with candles in golden holders.

Mr. and Mrs. John Cashion, Jr. received in the hall and directed to the dining room which was a symphony of beauty. The table was overlaid with a handsome cut work cloth which fell gracefully from the four corners to the floor. The centerpiece, a candelabra entwined with lacy fern and tendrils of ivy, rested upon a reflector surrounded with ivy leaves. A miniature arrangement was repeated on each corner of the table with runners of fern extending from each arrangement to the reflector. On the buffet was a very unique grouping of large magnolia leaves. On the upper tier of the buffet were lighted candles in holders entwined with ivy. Other bouquets of daisies and snapdragons were used at vantage points.

Those serving were Misses Martha Cox and Betty Hayes. Others assisting included: Mesdames Dewit Ware, A. A. Jolly, Bob Isenhour, and Miss Daisy Smith.

Miss Annie Roberts directed to the den. A side triangle arrangement of yellow glads, yellow snapdragons, and bronze mums complemented with yellow candles made a lovely mantel decoration. Harmonizing groups were used throughout the room.

Miss Vera Cole showed guests to the side porch which was adorned with large baskets of roses, larkspur, daisies, sweet peas, and potted plants. This made a very inviting setting where guests could linger and chat.

Mrs. Clarence Jolly presided at the register. The register stand was entwined with ivy and roses with a nosegay of glads by the book.

Goodbyes were said to Mr. and Mrs. Bill Smith of Graham and music was furnished throughout the evening by Mrs. F. R. McCurdy.
