Proper Fertilizing Saves Feeding Cost

Acel Patterson, Negro farmer of the Rock Creek community of Alamance County, had just enough money to seed two and a half acres of Ladino clover-grass pasture last spring. But where was the money for fertilization coming from?

It cost only $33 for Patterson and his son, Calvin, to seed the pasture, but proper fertilization would have cost considerably more if poultry had not come into the picture. Patterson decided that if he could add a small flock of chickens to his farm operations, he would not only have plenty of meat for the table, but Mrs. Patterson could sell some eggs and there would be manure to spread over the pasture.

With this in mind, according to Plesse Corbett, Negro county agent for the Agricultural Extension Service, Patterson and his son seeded the pasture. There are two milk cows on the Patterson farm, and although Alamance has been extremely dry this summer the pasture, fertilized with chicken manure, provided plenty of good grazing.

The Pattersons are "elated" over the results they are getting from their small Ladino pasture, says Corbett. "Recently," he says, "Mrs. Patterson invited me into her kitchen. She wanted to show me seven pounds of good country butter she had obtained from one churning of milk. Patterson feels he has already been fully repaid for his pasture investment—and the pasture is still there, and will be for many years." What's more, says Corbett, they now have an additional source of income in the chickens.

Patterson now plans to apply chicken manure to all his crops with the exception of tobacco.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

September 21, 1953

Dear Editor: We have been informed by J. Edgar Hoover, head of the F. B. I., and Mrs. Oveta Culp Hobby, secretary of the Department of Welfare, Health and Social Security, that, with the present trend, we can expect no less than a million arrests of teen-agers for juvenile delinquency during the coming year.

Many people do not believe this, for, if they did, they would take definite steps to prevent it. However, some of them would take the "Let George do it" attitude, but this is a job for all Americans working together. Unless we make every effort, these children may become hardened criminals, morphine addicts, alcoholics, or, worst of all, communists.

What we can do is to start immediately building sufficient school classrooms for our rapidly growing population. We need at least $25 billion worth of classrooms now in this country, and this should be undertaken by towns, cities, counties and states rather than the federal government, because so much money would be wasted through red tape and over-lapping bureaus if the federal government undertook the project.

It will be necessary to approve bond issues to pay for these classrooms, and again, in this particular, many people are very indifferent or are thinking only of their pocketbooks. I believe that the people would approve the bond issue if they knew the facts. I do not think that all the headlines in the papers will have one-tenth the effect on the people as would the city and county superintendents and principals. They can talk to the children and inform them thoroughly of the need for classrooms, and the necessity for their parents voting for bond issues. Usually children have more influence on their parents than anyone else.

The construction of school classrooms, along with recreational centers, parks, playgrounds, Scout and summer camps, will provide opportunities for our children to develop into well-rounded, healthy, right-thinking citizens.

In many states, and North Carolina is one of them, bond elections are being held soon to clear the way for school classroom construction. I hope that if you are living in a community where such an election is being held, you will go to the polls on election day and give your approval to the bond issue.

You will then be doing your part to save our children from juvenile delinquency.

On September 1, North Carolina's 1953 flue-cured tobacco production was estimated at 793,375,000 pounds, 11.7 per cent below 1952.
