A COMMON BLUNDER Lost WASHINGTON'S LAST BATTLE

Copyright, 1954

The brilliance of Washington's campaigns on the battlefields, and the victories won by his skill and daring are matters of recorded history. But one little known fact is that Washington lost his last battle because he underestimated the strength of one enemy; the common cold. Instead of taking care of a cold he had caught, Washington made little of it and rode forth into a heavy snowstorm. Complications set in and three days later, he was dead. How many others have succumbed to ills brought on by colds since then is incalculable. Take no chances. If the cold you have does not respond promptly to home treatment—or is accompanied by chills and fever—call your doctor at once.
