A Feature on Gardening by the Kings Mountain Council of Garden Clubs

"I think that I shall never see a poem lovely as a tree." We do not have anything in our yards and gardens we enjoy more in the spring and summer than trees. They are of major importance in landscaping, and you must select and choose your trees with care. Their sites must be carefully selected also. Here are a few points that will help you. If the tree is to be used near the house or terrace for shade purposes, select one that is free from pests so spraying is no problem. The tree must be strong structurally to avoid breakage in storms; it should, where possible, have ornamental value too. But above all keep the size within the scale of the property. This rules out, for the medium to small property, such as weeping willow, sugar maple, the heavy oaks, plane tree and the native sycamore. Silver maple, poplar, Willow, and similar trees are also unwise choices because they are too brittle and because their roots seek out and fill drain and water pipes.

For shade purposes the tree is placed with regard to the path of the sun. If only one tree can be used its exact placement is determined by the particular time of the day shade is needed. In the morning the sun is southeast. At noon it is directly overhead so there is no shadow except directly under the tree. To shade the roof, the tree would be placed near the house. But as the sun drops toward the west in the afternoon it will shine under the tree and onto the windows or terrace. Most use is secured from one tree in the afternoon by setting it at a point between south and west of the house or terrace and at a distance related to the spread of the tree of its height. A tree some 40 feet tall (and this is suitable for most places) will have an approximate spread of 30 feet, with some 15 feet either side of the trunk. To get maximum coverage the tree is set about 20 feet from the house, or terrace. At the southwest point it will catch the early afternoon sun and provide shade for most of the afternoon. Where two trees can be used the shade can be distributed over a greater area.

Scarlet, red or swamp maple is one of the better maples. Extremely ornamental in spring and fall, it has a lighter effect than the sugar or Norway maples. The white or greybarked variety is the most ornamental. Sweet gum, which develops into a tall tree, and pin oak are two excellent subjects. The Chinese elm, green ash, black walnut, and most all varieties of the flowering fruits, and weeping peach and cherries are very lovely, and most suitable for a small area.

Bride-Elect Honored At Party On Friday

Miss Rebecca Moss, bride-elect of May 1, was complimented at a miscellaneous shower given by Misses Joanne Hill and Cornelia Ware at the home of the latter on Friday night, April 22.

The guests enjoyed several games, after which sandwiches, pickles, potato chips, cookies, and Coca-Colas were served.

The honoree was presented a gardenia corsage by the hostesses. She received many lovely gifts.

Miss Rebecca Moss Gives Wedding Plans

The wedding of Miss Rebecca Margaret Moss, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Moss, and Odis Naaman McDaniel, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. McDaniel, will take place Sunday, May 1, at 12 o'clock noon in Bethlehem Baptist church.

Rev. Ronda E. Robbins, pastor of the church, will officiate at the double-ring ceremony.

Wedding music will be presented by Miss Mary Alice McDaniel, organist, and Mrs. James T. Logan, soloist. Both are of Kings Mountain.

Usher - groomsmen will include Bill McDaniel, the groom's elect's brother, Gene Carpenter, Roy Dixon, and Jack Lail, all of Kings Mountain.

The couple will enter the church together and following the ceremony, the bride-elect's parents will entertain at their home on Shelby road at a reception for the couple and the wedding party.

Couple Is Honored At Saturday Party

Mrs. Hood Watterson, Mrs. Travis Smith, Mrs. Dean McCraw, Mrs. Max Norman, and Mrs. J. Edward Craig entertained Saturday evening at an after-rehearsal party for the Norman-Conner wedding party.

The cakecutting was held at Esther Woman's club in Shelby. Guests included the wedding party and members of the immediate families.
