

MAJOR DON OLIVE

Major Don Olive on Marine Team In National Rifle-Pistol Matches

CAMP PERRY, Ohio.—Marine Major Donald C. Olive who resides with his wife Hilda at 960 N. E. 158th St., N. Miami Beach, Fla., is a member of the crack U. S. Marine Corps Reserve Rifle and Pistol Team competing against the top shooters of the land in the 1956 National Rifle and Pistol Matches here.

Major Olive, whose mother, Mrs. Edith Olive, lives at 708 W. Mountain St., Kings Mountain, was chosen for this coveted berth for his outstanding shooting performance in grueling preliminary competition.

He is one of the 32 Leatherneck Reservists who are pitting their skill against some 2,000 crack shots from other military services and from ranks of civilian clubs.

The National Rifle and Pistol Matches, the world series of the shooting world, continue here through Sept. 8.

Major Olive has been with the Reserve team for one year, and is the holder of many awards.

The Miami Leatherneck is charged with upholding a great tradition of victory here in the top competition of the shooting world.

Last year, the Reserve Leatherneck team captured the nation's highest prize for reserve military riflemen, the famed Rattlesnake Trophy.

In two weeks of large bore competition, the spirited civilian Leathernecks won more than 100 gold, silver and bronze medals and the NRA silverware awards. Actually, they doubled the high of any previous Marine Corps Reserve award winnings.

There was a special value on these awards for Reserve Leatherneck team members for they were won despite handicaps of limited practice time. Civilian obligations prevented Marine Reservists from matching any of the regular service teams in amount of united competition.

Major Olive attended Wake Forest College and is now a Forestry Investigator for the Florida Board of Forestry.

"Bottled gas" plays the part of all-round handyman to nearly nine million consumers in rural areas. This year, five and one-half billion gallons will be used to help the homemaker in such chores as water and space heating, cooking, refrigeration, clothes drying, and air conditioning. The man of the house has countless uses for liquefied petroleum gas, too—as a fuel for tractors, trucks, busses, irrigation machinery, weed burners, and other equipment. LPG is also used to heat incubators, dehydrate fruits and vegetables, prevent frost damage and for curing meats and tobacco. Petroleum in its many forms is constantly outdoing its own record of service to America's farm families.
