Are Supporting
Pearsall Plan

RALEIGH — Both of North Carolina's United States Senators say they are voting for the Public School Amendment on September 8.

Senator Sam Ervin said in a statement that he believes that the Pearsall Plan is the best one thus far advanced for the preservation of North Carolina's public schools. He and Governor Hodges will appear publicly in Charlotte next Monday in behalf of the amendment.

Senator Kerr Scott said before leaving on a trip to Panama that he will return in time for the special election or will vote absentee.

"I take the position," he said, "that our Senators and Representatives from throughout the State in bringing together their view points have agreed that the plan is all right. They have given close attention to it. For that reason I am casting my ballot for its passage."

Scott's campaign manager, former State Senator Terry Sanford of Fayetteville, is making speeches in behalf of the amendment.
