Bible Comment:

Our Real Faith Rests on Deeds, Not Just Words

We tend to put emphasis on words, not on deeds. But our real faith and our real religion rests on what we are and what we do, not on what we say or profess.

Jesus emphasized that truth by stories centering about extreme situations.

When He told of the good Samaritan caring for the beaten victim of thieves, He did not mean to imply that Samaritans were better than Scribes or Pharisees. He wanted to show that a Samaritan—despised, unorthodox outcast, according to the Jewish estimate of the time—could in reality be a much better man than an insincere person of orthodox profession.

It was precisely this fact that snugly religious people are in danger of forgetting. Too often we judge men by their labels.

Further illustrating His point, Jesus tells of the two sons whom the father asked to work in the vineyard.

The one son, so far as words are concerned, was very willing and compliant. He answered readily that he was going, but he did not go.

The other son, in some mood or disposition of rebelliousness, declared he would not go, but afterwards he repented and did go.

Jesus asks the very sensible question: Which of these did the will of his father?

The implication is very plain. Jesus asks us, in effect: Which of these two attitudes are we ourselves taking in relation to our Heavenly Father, who has asked us to go to work in the vineyard of the world and to live according to His will?

If men of religion everywhere could put the emphasis upon reality and less upon appearance, just as Jesus had done, the world would be a far better place in which to live.
