Lower Rates For Big Users Considered

The city board of commissioners will consider Thursday night adoption of a commercial water rate schedule, likely to be considerably lower than rates which large users would now pay. The board may also take action to adopt additional rate breaks in the commercial power schedule.

Mayor Glee A. Bridges said the adoption of a commercial water rate schedule is under consideration to help in the attraction of new industry to Kings Mountain. He did not indicate the minimum usage which would qualify a firm for the commercial water rate schedule, but indicated the board is considering a schedule which would average about 10 cents per 1,000 gallons of water for firms using great quantities.

Indications from Commissioner Ben Bridges on the power rate possibilities are that the board may adopt a rate of 1.2 per kilowatt hour on all over 5,000 KWH, and perhaps one cent per KWH on all over 10,000 KWH. These changes would give some relief to large commercial users who have lodged strong protests on last February's base rate increase from .88c to 1.4 cents per KWH.

Mayor Bridges also said the board may consider approving of a petition if sign-ups are completed, for the paving of Ramseur street to serve North School. He said the sign-ups are "going well", indicated the petition will represent about 100 percent of a flouting property if the board of education agrees, which he anticipates.

Cheapest city water rate today on the lone rate schedule is 15 cents per 1,000 gallons on consumption over two million gallons per month. State Department of Conservation and Development officials have indicated that many North Carolina communities offer 10c per 1,000 rates to large users.
