Whether Football Hero or Fan, All End In Obscurity Says Arthur

By Billy Arthur

It's about 2 o'clock on a late September afternoon, bright and crisp. Football weather, to be sure. Another season is under way and within the boundaries of the United States—from Notre Dame on the north to Oklahoma on the south, from California on the west to Duke on the east—selected representatives of young America are ready to spring at the throats and legs of their natural enemies.

All this because of a pig bladder! Not the pigskin that's so familiar today, but that of yesterday.

Many games have I played with a pig bladder. As a kid living with my uncles and aunts in Cabarrus County, I couldn't wait for hog killing time to come around. The other children and I anxiously anticipated the slaughter and could hardly wait for an uncle to get down to the bladder.

We almost danced as he skinned and cleaned it, then handed it to us. Then we were off and running in the direction of the open barn lot or field. One of us would blow it up as a child blows up a toy balloon, and tie it firmly with a string; then the game was on. Sometimes the game was football, sometimes baseball with a broken cultivator handle as a bat.

Our football was slippery at first, but de didn't mind. We only played the harder, because we knew that as soon as the bladder got dry and crackly the air would not stay in it or a hard kick would burst it and the game would be over till the next hog was killed. It was fine sport.

Quite often I have read where rain has stymied a team's offense; it couldn't pass because the ball was wet. It should have practiced with a fresh pig bladder. Thereby the ends would have learned to hold a slippery football.

I'm not saying football is not as much fun as it used to be. To day, as when I played with the bladder, the boys scrimmage, the bigger ones on the first team run over and trample the smaller but as eager ones. And the coaches grin and smile and poke each other in the ribs and admire the fine team they have put together. Just as the men folks used to watch us and admire the height and strength of the older kids as well as hope that the little ones would grow up in a year or so and be able to take care of themselves.

Today's players are devoted, aspiring. I can see them in the field house. They're stern, their teeth set to control their inner emotional tumult. Before them is the coach with flashing eyes and waving arms, imploring them, inciting them, and screaming for the blood of the enemy. All because the townspeople and the alumni want a sip of the cup of victory.

They rush onto the field amid cheers from thousands of people who have come to know them by numbers on their shirts and learned to love them by reading the program.

A man in a striped shirt blows a whistle, the team with the ball kicks off, the game is on. From this point, all the sports writers and fans are in disagreement as to what happens.

Two hours later this nation is divided again. One half of the population is sad, glum and depressed. The other half is turbulently happy.

Bible Comment:

What Does It Profit a Man to Gain the World?

WE know a man who does not pursue honesty as merely the best policy, but who is honest even if it is not to his own best interests. He speaks out of the voice of experience, as a father of sons to whom he is determined to set a good example.

He said that he had noticed, where men became wealthy and prosperous by dishonesty, that though they apparently didn't suffer, the consequences upon their sons and other members of their families were often disastrous.

What does a grafting or dishonest father gain if he becomes wealthy and attains a sort of success only to find that his sons seek to emulate his success through the crookedness that made it? What does he do when he sees them going down to ruin in a worldly as well as a spiritual way because of the false heritage he has given them?

Think of what is happening in the world as our friend has thought about it. Take a long-range view and see if the voices of wisdom aren't right when they whisper that human welfare is linked with honesty and right choice.

"The path of the just is as the shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day." This rich and beautiful figure brings to mind this saying, "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." It is in our will, the inner choice backed by good judgment, that our destiny rests.

To set before oneself the goal of good living, the way of honor and decency, is to be worldly-wise as well as spiritually sound. Even where men have to make great sacrifices to keep their integrity, honesty is justified. For what comfort or gain is there for any man to realize that what he has won has been won at the cost of himself?
