Bible Comment:

World's Religions Must Work As Peace Force

In what the late Wendell Willkie called "one world," every part of the world and its inhabitants, even the most remote, has become of importance in relation to world peace. This is particularly true of the religion, or religions, related to these parts.

The great religions have become world religions in a sense, and to an extent in which they have never been before. The beliefs, attitudes, and actions of their adherents may have reactions far beyond the area and people formerly concerned in a particular religion.

Good will and the future mutual relations of individuals, peoples, and nations may be deeply involved.

The study of religion has, then, an importance beyond that of an intellectual, or even distinctively religious, interest. Because of its possible effect on human relations, every world religion is subject to the scrutiny of the world's reason and conscience.

Of every world religion, it may be asked whether in its present state and activity, apart from the question of its professed inherent nature and fidelity to its founder, it is a cohesive force making for better relations between nations, or a divisive and trouble-making factor.

Henderson County's average corn yield for 1960 is 82 bushels an acre. Eighty-one dairy farms recently surveyed gained 17.5 bushels over the 1958 average of 64.5 bushels. Improved fertilization, cultural practices, and an excellent growing season received credit for the increase.

The amount of labor used in farming is about one-half the amount used in 1940. Since 1940, mechanical power and machinery on U. S. farms has increased 57 percent, while the use of fertilizer and lime has increased 71 percent.

Inauguration Plans Listed

Information concerning the 1961 inaugural of President-elect John F. Kennedy has been compiled by Congressman Basil L. Whitener.

Inaugural festivities will cover a three-day period, January 18-20, culminating with the inaugural parade at 2 p. m. January 20 and the inaugural ball in the evening.

Mr. Whitener said that inaugural ball tickets will be $25 per person, while parade tickets will be from $3 to $10. He said he understands that Washington hotels are accepting reservations for a minimum of four days, with rates at $20 per day and up.

Number of tickets to both the parade and ball to be assigned representatives and senators is not yet known, he added.

Jurisdiction over the inauguration will be exercised through two committees, the Joint Congressional committee, which will be in charge of arrangements for the inauguration ceremony, and the 1961 Inaugural committee, which will be in charge of arrangements for all other functions, including housing, the parade and
