COVERAGE FOR SELF-EMPLOYED FARMERS

According to Lex G. Barkley, manager of the Gastonia social security office, some self-employed farmers are either overlooking, or not taking advantage of, an opportunity to provide a protection for themselves and their families that could be most valuable to them; that, social security protection against loss of income because of retirement, disability or death.

To the young farmer, age 65 is a long way off and he may not be immediately concerned about any special provision whereby he can assure social security credits for his work. Although it is definitely to his advantage at age 65 to have secured credits for every year, he should especially not overlook the advisability of providing protection for himself if he should become disabled or for his family in case of his death. He should bear in mind that social security payments are only made when the worker has the required amount of work for such payments. The amount of work required depends on when the worker reaches retirement age, becomes disabled, or dies.

One thing a self-employed farmer can do to be sure he receives proper credit for his work is file complete and accurate income tax returns and use the optional method of reporting self-employment income from farming when it is to his advantage to do so. This option allows any self-employed farmer who has a gross profit from farming of $1800 or less to declare two-thirds of his gross profit as net profit for social security purposes. However, if he is engaged in farming only, his gross profit would have to be as much as $600.00 for him to secure social security credits by use of this option. If his gross profit was over $1800.00 and his net less than $1800.00, he may report $1200.00 for social security purposes. This optional method of reporting may be applied even though he had a net loss from his farming operation, and may mean the difference in receiving four social security credits or none. The lack of creditable income for only one year can make the all important difference of payment or no payment, when a worker retires, becomes disabled, or dies.

Whitener Member Of Tax Committee

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Congressman Basil L. Whitener was today appointed to a special Subcommittee on Interstate Taxation of the House of Representatives. The announcement of his appointment was made by Congressman Emanuel Celler, Chairman of the House Judiciary Committee.

This special subcommittee is being set up as a result of special legislation passed by the 86th Congress providing for a complete study of the interstate tax situation which has resulted from conflicting court decisions in recent years.

"This is probably one of the most important committees of the Congress," Chairman Celler stated. "It will be engaged in one of the heaviest work schedules to be experienced in the current session, and I have every confidence that the committee will bring forth legislation which will get us out of the present confused condition in the field of interstate taxation."

The subcommittee will be under the chairmanship of Congressman Edwin E. Willis of Louisiana, whose appointment was announced simultaneously with the announcement of Whitener's appointment. Other Congressmen appointed to the special subcommittee are Byron Rogers of Colorado, Lester Holtzman of New York, and Robert Kastner of Wisconsin.

When the first college term opens at St. Andrews in September, 1961, the huge Academic Building, the Music Conservatory, the Student Center and six residence buildings will be ready and several others will be under construction.
