Hitting 'Homers', Football-Style

Roger Maris and his record 61 and Mickey Mantle's near-season-long bid for the same honor left sports fans homer-conscious during the baseball season, and vaulted the Yankees into the World Series.

Now comes football, and a couple of gridiron-style "home runs" played opposite roles in deciding a pair of grid games on our schedule last weekend. It was singular that both the Kings Mountain-Shelby game here Friday night, and the Carolina-State scrap at Chapel Hill on Saturday provided somewhat similar situations of footballhomers playing their part in the outcome of the tussles be tween the bitter rivals.

The two long runs (54 yards from scrimmage and 45 on a punt return) by sophomore Charlie Peeler of Shelby broke open the otherwise-tight defensive struggle at City Stadium. Those two "homers" marked the only difference in the two teams.

ers" by State sophomore backs in the early mirutes were wiped out by a flock of "singles" by the Tar Heels during the rest of the afternoon. Soph Mike Clark returned the opening kickoff for 83 yards and a TD, and another firstyear back, Tony Koszarsky, scampered 37 yards with a punt to set-up a field goal and a quick 10-0 lead for State.

The quick "homers" worked in reverse, however, as Carolina smashed out enough "singles and doubles" for the 27-10 win, the first time in seven years that the Tar Heels have kicked off a campaign with a victory.

Drawing a parallel on the two games is a bit far-fetch- Yards rushing ed except for the somewhat-similar long runs and their Yards passing part in the game. But the situations struck a cord of simi- Passes Attempted Passes Completed larity. Passes had

But, in truth, our side was far too spent by that time, two touchdowns back and time running out.

Pitching 'No-Hitter' In First Downs

The situation at Chapel Hill was similar . . . only in reverse. The Wolfpack belted its "homers" in the first in-ning. But the Tar Heels took over the middle frames, and

In those first 46 minutes and 40 seconds of the game, the Tar Heels ran 81 plays from scrimmage, com- pared to only 19 for State. The Gabe had his opportunities after that, and took advantage of them, scoring a TD and passing for another, and having the Wolfpack on the move at the end. Until those waning minutes, the Tar Heels, in general, and guard Jack Tillery, in particular, gave Gabriel all he could handle when he had the few opportunities to handle the ball. Tillery, a 185-pound guard from Wilson, was the Gabe's chief tormentor, slicing by blockers to hawk the big quarterback unmercifully on every pass or option situation. The final story of the game, however, was written in the ball control and the Tar Heels refusal to lose their poise in the face of the two early "homers." Carolina simply kept the pigskin to its self, running 9) plays from scrimmage, against State's 42. It's interesting too, that exactly half (45) of the Tar Heel plays were con- sumed on four touchdown marches, ranging from 43 to 75 yards.
