

Insect Control Pamphlet Offered

The annual battle over who gets to eat the garden vegetables, the grower or the insect, has begun. It will continue as long as there's anything to fight over. Each plant becomes an individual battleground during the gardening season. The enemies are numerous and come in more varieties than hand soap on the grocery shelf.

Proper identification and proper selection of the correct treatment are necessary to successfully combat the pests.

This is the subject of a publication, "Vegetable Insect Control," recently published by the N. C. Agricultural Extension Service at Raleigh, as prepared by entomologists Charles H. Brett and R. B. Chalfant.

The leaflet is well illustrated with drawings of some 30 different insects that attack garden vegetables. Some are presented at different stages of development to help in early identification. It also lists varieties of vegetables, giving the insects that are likely to attack each and suggesting the most effective treatment.

This publication is available at local county agricultural extension offices or may be obtained by writing the Department of Agricultural Information, N. C. State College, Raleigh, N. C. Request Leaflet No. 88.

Broiler prices are expected to decline at least one cent per pound in 1963.

With The Farm Women

CONSTRUCTION OF FABRICS STUDIED

Items this week from Currituck, Johnston, Anson, Haywood, Rutherford and Davidson Counties.

"I respect fabrics more since I have seen it made," stated Mrs. W. W. Denby of the Sligo Club in Currituck County. Mrs. Elizabeth Sanderlin, home economics agent, says her club members went on a tour of the Roanoke Rapids Mills to observe the construction of fabrics.

Many of the women purchased material for draperies, slip covers and upholstery while on the tour.

JOHNSTON FASHION REVUE

"Fashion Fair" will be the theme for the annual fashion show in Johnston County, according to Mrs. Gordon Brown, Selma, Rt. 2, clothing leader.

Mrs. Sarah Sasser, home economics agent, says the annual show on April 17 will be a colorful event as the Home Demonstration Club members model spring styles made from new fabrics now available on the market.

SIMPLE SHORT CUTS IN SEWING

Homemakers in Anson County are getting the sewing fever during the early spring days. Miss Rebecca Leonard, assistant home economics agent, says they are learning simple short cuts in sewing such as using zippers instead of buttons and button holes and putting in hems without hemming tape.

They are also learning to sew on wash and wear, laminated, pile, and stretch fabrics.

LEADERS RECOGNIZED

The 4-H leaders in Haywood County recently attended a banquet where they were recognized for their service to the youth program.

Gwili Brendell, assistant home economics agent, says the leaders were presented with a recognition certificate, a leader gate sign, and a year's subscription to "National 4-H News."

HEATING SYSTEMS

"County residents planning to remodel their homes, build, or improve their present heating systems recently attended meetings on various types of heating systems," reports Miss Eugenia Ware, home economics agent in Rutherford County.

"Questions asked more often related to planning, installation and operation costs, convenience, comfort, requirements for installing certain types of heat, moisture control and insulating," she added.

PLANNING AHEAD

Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Clodfelter of Davidson County agree that it does pay to plan ahead. They have just completed a two-year plan for remodeling and landscaping their farm home.

Mrs. Martha Thompson, home economics agent, says one of the main attractions is the back porch which was converted to a family room.

Bank Merger Is Approved

Carl G. McGraw, First Union National Bank of North Carolina and John E. Sockwell, President Bank of Greensboro, jointly announced today that the Comptroller of the Currency has approved the merger of Bank of Greensboro and First Union National Bank of North Carolina.

The merger will be effective as of the close of business, Tuesday, April 9, 1963. With the addition of Bank of Greensboro, its main office and five branches, First Union National Bank will serve with 60 banking houses in 25 cities and towns, including Asheville, Brevard, Canton, Charlotte, Cherokee, Clyde, Durham, Gastonia, Goldston, Greensboro, Hendersonville, Highlands, Kings Mountain, Lenoir, Lexington, Liberty, Marion, Foston, Siler City, Statesville, Sylva, Waynesville, Whitel, Wilson, and Winston-Salem.

Total combined resources of the two institutions, in excess of $300 million, will place the bank among the top 1220 out of approximately 13,000 banks in the United States and among the top four banks in North Carolina. The capital funds and reserves of First Union National Bank following the merger will be more than $30,000,000 and the line of credit to any one borrower will be enlarged to $2,250,000.

First Union National Bank in Greensboro will be served by the same outstanding board of directors who have rendered valuable service through the years. All officers and employees currently associated with each institution will continue in their present capacity. John E. Sockwell, who will assume the new title of Executive Vice President, will continue to direct the bank's activities in Greensboro.

Economic trends indicate a strong demand for fruits, vegetables and tree nuts during 1963.
