Put Fun Into Fashions, Add Peasant Embroidery

Put fun into the fashions you create by adding the distinctive touch of peasant embroidery. A new method of applying trim, it's simple and easy to do... and offers endless possibilities for the woman who sews.

Peasant embroidery is created with a simple zigzag stitch across rows of cotton rickrack. Using cotton embroidery floss in a contrasting color, all you do is run the needle in and out of a bit of fabric at each "V" in the rickrack, crossing the rickrack from side to side. The stitch secures the rickrack while creating an intricate-looking design.

You'll be amazed at the many different effects you can obtain with peasant embroidery. Equally attractive on solid colored fabrics and checked cotton gingham, it can be applied to children's clothes, sports outfits, and daytime dresses. In addition, peasant embroidery is suitable for cafe curtains, tablecloths, pillowcases, and towels.

Delicate or bold motifs can be created simply by varying colors of embroidery thread and rickrack and by alternating sizes of rickrack.

Legislative Highlights

As new bills continued to pour in, the General Assembly cleared one major hurdle and marked up one major accomplishment. SB 72 is now awaiting ratification after both houses adopted a conference report which leaves State College without a comma to its name. The name as finally approved:

rickrack in white or a delicate pastel shade. Regular size rickrack will work well on anything from girls' dresses to cafe curtains, while big, bold, and colorful designs can be achieved by stitching over jumbo rickrack. Alternate rows of rickrack in varying sizes for still other effects.

Another variation results from combining rickrack with cotton bias tape. You can use quarter-inch double fold tape or single tape which comes in one-half or one-inch widths. Just place the rickrack over the tape and embroider it in place. Each combination creates a new trim effect.

Have fun with this new idea, and create your own original designs for fashion with a flair! North Carolina State of the University of North Carolina at Raleigh.

Minimum Wage
The Senate passed SB 96, increasing the minimum hourly wage to 85 cents in 1964 and to $1 in 1965, after supporters beat down by a 21-20 vote an amendment which would have limited the increase to 85 cents. As this action was being taken, Rep. Calder introduced HB 280 to increase the minimum to 80 cents in 1964 and to 85 cents in 1965. The House Committee on Manufacturers and Labor reported favorably the Calder bill on Thursday, after rejecting an amendment which would have increased the minimum to $1 in 1966, and after declining, by a vote of 19-15, to report favorably HB 8 which would increase the minimum to $1 in 1964.

Blue Law

SB 141, prohibiting sales of certain items on Sunday, was black as well as blue Friday after it was amended in the House to exempt household items and after more than 25 counties as well as particular areas in other counties were exempted from the bill. The amended bill passed third reading in the House Friday and is now back in the Senate for concurrence in the House amendments.
