UNC Freshman is Queen of Hearts

CHAPEL HILL. — Miss Nancy Wilkins, 18-year old University of North Carolina freshman, has been named Research Triangle Queen of Hearts to help promote the 1964 Tar Heel Heart Fund campaign, now underway.

The North Carolina Heart Association points out the significant contribution made by heart researchers in the Research Triangle area during the past 15 years. Duke and UNC heart research activities are well known throughout the country, the state heart group states.

Miss Wilkins is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Y. Wilkins of Tryon.

AWARD WINNER. "Lawrence of Arabia," voted the best motion picture in 1963, opens Sunday at the Joy Theatre.

Thrilling Vistas Of Rare Beauty Unfold In "Lawrence Of Arabia"

The lure of faraway places with strange-sounding names is greater today than ever before. In the opinion of motion picture director David Lean, who sought out them out distant and hitherto inaccessible spots on the map as the locales for the Sam Spiegel-David Lean production of "Lawrence of Arabia," Academy Award winner as best picture of the year, and now at the Joy Theatre in a special exclusive engagement.

All of these were selected as sites for the spectacular new production from Spiegel and Lean, who also teamed to make "The Bridge on the River Kwai," in the jungles of Ceylon.

"We have brought to the screen," says Lean, "a landscape and an emotion-stirring background such as has never been seen before."

"Lawrence of Arabia" stars Alec Guinness, Anthony Quinn, Jack Hawkins, Jose Ferrer, Anthony Quayle, Claude Rains, Arthur Kennedy and introduces Omar Sharif as Ali and Peter O'Toole as Lawrence. Robert Bolt penned the screenplay for the Sam Spiegel-David Lean production, a Columbia Pictures release. "Lawrence of Arabia" was filmed in Super-Panavision and in Technicolor.

It starts Sunday at the Joy Theatre.

Letter To Editor

Dear Sir:

We would like to express our appreciation to the people of Kings Mountain for their interest and cooperation during the World Day of Prayer.

We especially would like to thank the merchants for closing for an hour during the day—and thank the mills, mines and hospital for cooperating in a service of prayer. We would also like to thank the Mayor for proclaiming February 14th as the World Day of Prayer in our community.

We are grateful for the excellent coverage given us by the Kings Mountain Herald and Radio Station WKMT.

The attendance at all the services was most gratifying. We feel that as a community we were drawn closer together and closer to God through this endeavor.

WORLD DAY OF PRAYER COMMITTEE

Gentlemen:

On behalf of the churches and civic organizations of Grover, N. C. I would like to thank you for the splendid job you did of helping us advertise the recent visit of the Bloodmobile in our town. We are happy to report that 261 persons responded to this visit. Due to your support, we feel that this visit was a success.

Thank you,
Knox Neely,
Publicity Chairman

Heart Deaths On Increase

CHAPEL HILL. — University of North Carolina epidemiologists consider heart disease "one of the major health problems of our time" and predict a continued rise in North Carolina's death rate from coronary heart disease for men between ages 55 and 64.

"In the decade 1950 to 1960 the age-specific death rate for men ages 55 to 64 attributed to coronary heart disease increased by 30% in North Carolina, but the rate for men of the same highly vulnerable ages in the United States as a whole remained steady over the decade," the epidemiologists report.

Although the national death rate from coronary heart disease will stay at present levels, for North Carolina it will continue to rise, according to the report made public by the North Carolina Heart Association.

The predictions, made by Drs. John C. Cassel, H. A. Tynor, John R. McDonough, and C. David Jenkins, were given to the State group for inclusion in a time capsule recently placed at Chapel Hill for reopening in 1971.

"Our epidemiological studies have shown a relation between the process of industrialization in an area and the frequency of deaths attributed to coronary heart diseases," the statement says.

"Unless some way can be found to offer the discontinuities associated with the transition from an agricultural to manufacturing economy, the North Carolina rates of coronary heart disease may be expected to continue to rise until the State's industrial growth spurt is completed," the scientists conclude.

They also predict that coronary heart disease will be found to be "not one disease but several."

The Department of Epidemiology of the University of North Carolina recognizes the diseases of the heart to be one of the major health problems of our time. As epidemiologists are concerned not only with the study of the distribution of these diseases in the population of North Carolina and the United States, but also with research aimed at determining the processes operating within persons and communities, which increase the risks of being stricken by heart disease," the epidemiologists explain.

The predictions were made on the basis of studies done by other workers as well as from research done within the department at Chapel Hill. Not all of the epidemiologists concurred in all the predictions but each prediction was supported by a majority of the group.

Cordless Appliance Is On Increase

Like many other gadgets once considered luxuries, cordless appliances will someday be considered necessities, according to Changing Times, the Kiplinger Magazine.

An article in the current issue of the magazine, noting that the list of such appliances is growing rapidly, advises consumers to keep in mind the following advantages and disadvantages.

First, since cordless appliances carry batteries, they are heavier than conventional appliances. Where an operator is drilling downward with an electric drill, this extra weight can be useful. Otherwise, it is a disadvantage.

Second, cordless appliances are more expensive than ordinary appliances, chiefly because of the batteries and charger.

Third, because of lower voltages, cordless appliances may have less power than conventional appliances. This obviously will be no disadvantage where the cordless appliances has all the power that's needed for a given job. But it's something to check into.

Fourth, the batteries do run down. The length of time the appliance will be used should be checked in advance against the usable time between charges.

Against these disadvantages should be weighed the advantages of portability and safety, the article points out. The low voltage of cordless tools makes them safer, and they need not be grounded—another safety factor. The batteries, though they run down, can be recharged hundreds of times. And, the magazine concludes, "You can take your TV on a picnic and your electric drill on your boat."

They also predict that coronary heart disease will be found to be "not one disease but several."

The Department of Epidemiology of the University of North Carolina recognizes the diseases of the heart to be one of the major health problems of our time. As epidemiologists are concerned not only with the study of the distribution of these diseases in the population of North Carolina and the United States, but also with research aimed at determining the processes operating within persons and communities, which increase the risks of being stricken by heart disease," the epidemiologists explain.
