

FARM NEWS

Items this week from Chowan, Johnston, Union, Duplin, Madison and Rockingham counties.

RECORD KEEPING IMPORTANT

The importance of keeping records for income tax purposes, farm records in general, getting the best use out of the simplified farm record book, filling for gas-line tax refunds and social security regulations were some of the topics discussed at club meetings in Chowan County last month.

Miss Pauline Calloway, home economics agent, and C. W. Overman, county extension chairman, conducted the class after the joint dinner meetings of Home Demonstration Club members and the husbands.

UPHOLSTERED FURNITURE

"I feel I can better judge the quality of their construction since I have torn down and had to build back an old chair," stated Mrs. Billy Lambert of Johnston County, after attending a re-upholstering workshop.

Mrs. Moody Clemmons, Clayton, said she worked on one of the worse looking chairs she could find. But after two days work and less than $10, she had a platform rocker restored good as new. Mrs. Sarah Ann Sasser, home economics agent, says many of the women are planning to hold workshops in their local communities.

HOBBY TURNS INTO BUSINESS

Mrs. Harold Moore, Monroe, Rt. 1, has turned her cake decorating hobby into a profitable business. She has a basic cake recipe but uses her own ideas in decorating the cakes.

Mrs. Rebecca Mooney, home economics agent, says a special metal gadget for making the "roses" was designed by Mrs. Moore and crafted by her husband.

PROJECTS SET UP

Cedar Fork Community Development home improvement Committee members met with Mrs. Ruth Brinson to plan their projects, reports Mrs. Mae Spicer, home economics agent.

The Duplin County group made plans that included pruning shrubs, making mail boxes, encouraging families to plant flowering trees in their yards. They also plan to give short reports on home improvement at their monthly meetings.

FOODS FOR FREEZING

"The pork I froze this year was the best ever," commented Mrs.

Mary Ellen Metcalf, at her club meeting in Madison County. "And the only thing I did different was to completely cool the meat before freezing."

Mrs. Ethel Wallin, home economics agent, says they have been stressing the importance of following instructions for freezing in order to have high quality frozen food.

WINE BAKING CONTEST

The girls in Rockingham County may not be able to bake a cherry pie but they sure can bake enriched corn meal muffins. Thirty-two people watched Jane Rhodes mix and bake the winning corn meal muffins in the early-teen division of the county bake-off. Karen Handy placed second.

Miss Dorothy Barrier, associate home economics agent, says Judy Smith placed first in the pre-teen division with her sister, Carol, placing second.

March 16th Is Important For Farmers

March 16 is an important date for many Cleveland County cotton farmers, according to Ralph Harrill, County Office Manager, ASCS County Office. This is the final day that cotton farmers can release their cotton to the county ASC committee.

The farmer that releases his cotton is benefiting both himself and other cotton farmers. By releasing cotton that will not be planted, the farmer gets credit in the establishment of future allotments. The county also gets credit. By releasing, the farmer protects both his allotment and the county allotment. He also helps his neighbor in that the released cotton can be reopinioned to other farmers that would like to plant more cotton in 1964. All cotton farmers that will not plant their entire allotment should release it by March 16.

Alabaster, the soft stone used for statuettes and other decorative objects, is found principally in northern Italy and England. It is a fine-grained translucent form of gypsum, usually pure white but sometimes pink, yellowish or dark-streaked. According to the Book of Knowledge, the ancient alabaster used in the Middle East is a harder, yellowish stone formed in caves and similar to stalactites and stalagmites.

Here's the Answer

Agriculture in Action

Tobacco Associates, Inc., doesn't do a lot of horn tootin'. This would waste a lot of wind. Instead, this federation of groups backing our leaf industry expands its stamina in efforts to boost tobacco sales here and abroad.

The 1963 program was noteworthy, and many of the projects deserve mention. Just a few:

The Washington office had advertising programs going in fifteen countries which market products in which U. S. tobacco is used. Sharing the cost were USDA, other U. S. tobacco trade associations, and the foreign leaf manufacturers involved.

The overseas office — located in Belgium — worked closely with European manufacturers and with the policy-makers on matters of tariff and non-tariff barriers.

The organization participated in high-level activities directed at promoting U. S. trade in general. These included the White House Conference on Trade Expansion and, in Amsterdam, the Symposium on Foreign Trade. A helping hand was rendered in preparing and presenting tobacco recommendations to the President's Special Representative for Trade Negotiations. They will be offered in May at the Geneva Conference of General Agreements on Tariffs and Trade. Authorities feel this meeting may decide the future of U. S. farm exports.

The Association's financial aid and direction helped give impetus to the work of the Tobacco Growers' Information Committee, Tobacco Industry Research Committee, Tobacco Tax Council, and Committee for a National Trade Policy.

An Association representative visited Singapore, the Fiji Islands, and Australia, to help work the kinks out of marketing developments which hinder sale of tobacco. An American based office of the Japan Monopoly Corporation was set up. Tobacco Associates helped.

Arrangements were completed for production and distribution of a series of color movies promoting overseas consumption of U. S. leaf tobacco. The films will be narrated in the native languages of the United Kingdom, West Germany, the Netherlands, France, Denmark, Sweden and Egypt.

And the export picture looks better. For this, no small measure of credit is due Tobacco Associates.

NEWSBRIEF: U. S. Senate heard a proposal to wipe out the tobacco support program. It didn't listen. The move was beaten down by a 63-26 vote. Congratulations: To tobacco state senators who voted the motion whipped.

Overheard: There's a new book out for aspiring politicians: "How to Win Friends Who Can Influence People."

Keir Dullea and Lois Nettleton in a romantic close-up from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Mail Order Bride," comedy-drama of a couple who marry for convenience and then discover love. Buddy Ebsen and Warren Oates also star in the action-filled outdoor drama of the early West, filmed in the "Big Steers" in Panajia and color.

In the 1830's and 1840's dams and locks were constructed in an effort to make the Haw River navigable. These efforts were not successful.

More than a century ago large sums of money were spent to try to make the Roanoke River navigable. These efforts were not successful.

Once a steamboat plied the French Broad River above Asheville. The river was unsuitable for such purposes, and steamboat navigation failed.

The Cape Fear River has been noted for the rapidity with which it floods. Proposed dams, at New Hope and elsewhere, are expected to relieve such flooding.
