Slow Down, Warns Scheidt To Motorists
Motor Vehicles Commissioner Edward Scheidt called September the beginning of a new year—a nine month year when North Carolina's schools start their regular sessions.
He pointed out that the opening of school doors affect virtually everyone in the state.
"This is especially true if you have youngsters in your own home; you can count on an immediate change in your living pattern," he said. "And this change is not only confined to the home. When you drive you're sure to notice some differences. School zones being guarded by police, extra traffic signs and signals and school bus patrolmen.
"In the after school hours," Scheidt continued, "there are increased numbers of bike riders and larger groups of child pedestrians going home. In rural areas, of necessity, children may be walking in the roadway."
Scheidt said the fall change-over in the traffic situation focuses attention on a major problem—child traffic accidents.
"Unfortunately, about 100 young pedestrians under 15 are killed in the state each year in traffic," the vehicles chief said. "And the worst part is that most of the deaths could have been prevented."
He placed most of the blame for the toll on drivers. He admitted children are often careless and that they often bring about dangerous situations.
"But a mature, alert driver should be ready to accept the responsibility for counteracting the effect of such heedlessness," Scheidt declared. "Drivers must learn to expect the unexpected from children and act quickly to save any exposed to harm. Even through the child's own carelessness."
Scheidt listed some basic rules for protecting children in traffic, effective not only at this time of year but year round.
Keep a sharp lookout for youngsters always, but particularly in school zones, near playgrounds and other places where children generally gather.
Be alert for traffic signs, signals, police, school patrols and children themselves wherever you're driving.
Don't compete with bike riders. Slow down, give them a wide berth in traffic.
Cut back speed sharply in residential areas and near schools.

Allen Child's Rites Conducted
Funeral for Emily Jean Allen, nine-year-old granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dewey P. Randall of Kings Mountain, was held Wednesday at 2 p.m. from Shelby's First Baptist church.
The youngster died in a Charlotte hospital Monday night, some 3½ hours after she was struck by an automobile while riding her bicycle in Shelby.
A rising fourth grader at Marion school, she was struck by a car operated by Robert Moody Dorsey, Jr., at the intersection of McGowan Road and Ashley Street about 6:28 p.m. Monday.
According to investigating policemen, the child and another little girl were riding their bicycles out of Ashley Street onto McGowan Road and Dorsey was driving south on McGowan. Officer Clyde Adams said Dorsey avoided striking the other girl, who reportedly preceded the Allen child, and then the car skidded 46 feet, nine inches in an effort to miss the Allen girl. Adams quoted Dorsey and two witnesses as stating the accident was unavoidable.
Cleveland County Coroner J. Ollie Harris and Policeman Adams said their investigation of the accident is continuing and that no charges have been made.
Dorsey, an auto salesman, was driving a new car that he was to show a prospective customer. Police said speed of the vehicle was approximately 30 mph in a 35 zone.
Besides her Kings Mountain grandparents, Emily Jean Allen is survived by her father, A. Donald Allen; her stepmother, Mrs. Hazel Harrill Allen; two brothers, Donald Allen, Jr. and Robert Allen; and her paternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Allen of Shelby.
