Rev. Lawrence Roberts of Shelby heard the exchange of pledges, using the double-ring ceremony.

Mrs. J. C. Bridges was organist for the program of nuptial music and B. S. Peeler was vocal soloist. Mr. Peeler sand Gounod's "Entreat Me Not to Leave Thee" before the ceremony and Malotte's "The Lord's Prayer" as the benediction.

Mrs. Bridges played "Ah, So Pure" by Von Flotow; "O Lord Most Holy" by Franck; "O Perfect Love" by Barnby; and "I Love Thee" by Grieg. The processional was "Bridal Chorus" from "Lohengrin" by Wagner and Mendelssohn's "Wedding March" from "A Midsummer Night's Dream.

The church altar was banked by arrangements of all-white glads, snapdragons, and ehrysanthemums interspersed with ocean spray fern, Japanese yew and

The bride and bridegroom came to the altar together. The bride's formal gown was designed of Italian silk peau de soie and imported Alencon lace. The empire ace bodice was fashioned with scalloped portrait neckline and cap sleeves. A contour cummerbund appliqued with lace motifs circled the waistline, and the bell skirt, appliqued with lace medallions centered with tiny bows, dipped to the back into a chapel length train. Her triple-tier veil of imported silk illusion was attached to a tall pillbox of Alencon lace trimmed with lily-of-the-valley and she wore a pearl necklace, a family heirloom that had belonged to her grandmother. Her nosegay was of stephanotis and white bride's roses.

For her daughter's wedding. Mrs. Yarbrough chose a cocktaillength dress of robin blue silk organza with an elongated bodice of Swiss embroidery in blue tones. She wore a Sally Victor pillbox of blue silk organza and braid with a cage veil and a white orchid shoulder corsage.

The bridegroom's mother wore a cocktail-length dress of petal pink chiffon belted in pink satin and trimmed with crystals. Her matching pink petal hat was dropped with complexion veil and she wore a white orchid as a shoulder corsage.

Dwain Yarbrough, brother of the bride, ushered with Tommy Clay, of Greensboro, cousin of the bridegroom, Gary Blanton, Paul Fulton, Eugene Gibson and David Roberts, all of Kings Mountain. Miss Elizabeth Medlin kept a guest register in the vestibule of the church where the bride and bridegroom greeted wedding guests after the ceremony. For a trip to the coast of North and South Carolina, the new Mrs. Littlejohn chose a brown cotton three-piece suit with leather accessories and a white fur tam. She wore yellow rosebuds at her
