Savings Bonds Quiz

Q—I have been buying Bonds in my name, with my son as co-owner, intending to use them to put him through college. I understand there could be a tax advantage if the bonds were in his name, with myself as beneficiary, and want to know if these bonds can be re-issued.

A—Yes; however you would be required to report and pay Federal income tax on interest that has accrued on the bonds up until the time of the change in ownership. From that point on, accrued interest would become income of your son for purposes of taxation. There would be no State or local income taxes.

Q—When is the most advisable or advantageous time to exchange E bonds for H bonds?

A—Whenever a need for current income arises, most commonly at retirement time, accrued interest on the E bonds does not need to be reported for tax purposes until the H bonds are redeemed; and regular Treasury checks for interest on the H bonds are mailed every six months.
