E What's Ahead In Clothing

RALEIGH — What's ahead in clothing and fabrics for the consumer in 1965?
Miss Mary Em Lee, extension clothing specialist, North Carolina State, gives a run-down.
1. Improved wash and wear materials.
2. Trends in wool—Many of today's wools are washable. New improved wools have stretch qualities and hold a permanent crease and pleat.
3. In addition to these qualities, tomorrow's wools will also have better moth proofing characteristics, resistance to soil and will be longer wearing.
4. In 1965, a new shrinkproof yarn will be used to make machine washable woolen knit goods.
5. Stretch fabrics—Many fashion forecasters predict that eventually at least 90 per cent of all fabric will have some stretch. Look for new all-cotton stretch socks for men and boys in 1965.
6. Moldable garments—Scientists now can mold cotton stretch fabrics into three - dimensional shapes, in one of the newest developments in chemically treated cotton.
7. Some day swim suits will be produced in two pieces—back and front—then sewed or guled together.
8. Hats, gloves, shoes and underwear, too, may one day be made from moldable fabric.
9. Double-faced fabric—New on the market is a sportswear den-cotton—From the U.S. Department of Agriculture comes a treatment that not only gives wash-and-wear properties to cotton but also adds permanent dyes, starch and other finishing materials.

In addition, this single treatment may eventually attach other chemicals to cotton—including those that give resistance to fire, rot and mildew and some repellancy to oil and water.
