

Nurses Set Area Workshop

Raleigh — A Clinical workshop for Operating Room Nurses from throughout the state will be conducted by the North Carolina State Nurses' Association on Tuesday, April 6, in Charlotte in the School of Nursing auditorium of Charlotte Memorial Hospital.

Two Charlotte physicians and two surgical nurses will give clinical lectures. Dr. George G. Culbreth will speak on "Chemothalamectomy, Parkinson's Disease, and Neurosurgery in General." Following this will be a discussion of "Nurse's Role in Neurosurgery" by Mary Orren, surgical nurse at Presbyterian Hospital.

Dr. Lawrence K. Boggs will lecture on "Congenital Anomalies of Upper Urinary Tract," followed by a discussion of "Nurse's Role in Urological Surgery" by Sylvia Pressman, surgical head nurse in Urology, Charlotte Memorial Hospital.

Registration for the workshop begins at 9 a.m. The sessions conclude at 4 p.m. The workshop is open to all members of NCSNA.

Mrs. Heien M. Ray of Smithfield, Chairman of the NCSNA Operating Room Nurses Conference Group, will preside.

This is the third in a series of six clinical workshops planned for the spring months by NCSNA for its members. On April 22 a workshop on "Use of Television in Nursing Education" will be held at Duke University. On April 29 the Public Health Nurses will hold a workshop on "A Method for Measuring Patient Progress" at the Charlotte-Mecklenburg Health Department.

The final workshop will feature "Nursing Care of the Cardiac Patient" and will be held at Memorial Mission Hospital in Asheville. It is specifically designed for General Duty and Private Duty Nurses.

Farmers Warned Of Blue Mold

The severity of the blue mold problem will be determined by the weather — cool, wet, windy weather favors spread of blue mold—and by promptness with which farmers act to prevent the disease.

"Our farmers have an excellent record in this respect," Todd pointed out. "Blue mold losses have been very light over the past few years. Over 90 per cent of our growers treat their plant beds for the disease."

As a result, said Todd, "we haven't experienced serious blue mold damage since 1957 when heavy losses were suffered and planting was delayed on many farms."

The first report of the disease this year was in Bladen county. Under the right combination of weather conditions, the disease could spread rapidly across the state.

Todd suggests that growers in the Eastern and Border belts begin treatment or continue treatment if they have already begun. Treatment should begin in the other areas, including the barley area, when plants reach the size of a dime or when blue mold is reported nearby.

The plant pathologist emphasized that treatment is fairly simple and effective, "but it is a preventive treatment and will not cure the disease if it is already present."

He explained that treatment with a fungicide containing either ferbam, zineb or maneb prevents three diseases, blue mold, damping off and anthracnose.

"One of the common mistakes farmers often make is when they stop treatment when they begin transplanting," Todd related. "Treatment should be continued until transplanting is complete."
