Telephone Service

Kings Mountain. Houck said that underground cables have several advantages. The wires are more fully protected; no exposed wires are present and open to the weather, and poles are not subject to damage. Additional growth facilities have been added along the cable route to provide for future telephone requirements, and seven wire crossings along U.S. Highway 4 have been eliminated. In addition, a large amount of other equipment and materials have been installed in telephone buildings in the two cities.

The Kings Mountain calling area will be increased by some 26,500 telephones in Gastonia. Gastonia's calling area will be increased by some 4,500 Kings Mountain telephones.

"This greatly expanded calling area will make telephone service more valuable and convenient for every telephone user in these communities, and it will be a step forward in the development of these progressive areas," Houck said.

The Big C." In Kings Mountain, an all-out effort will be made this April to not only raise funds, but to save lives lost needlessly to this disease.

Billboards carrying the new slogan have been donated all over the state, and local Crusade Chairmen in North Carolina's 100 counties are beginning their Crusades.

Garland Atkins, State Publicity Chairman, stated today that efforts were being continued in North Carolina to bring the Crusade to local communities. "We want the people of North Carolina to be conscious that they are helping their own neighbors and friends who have cancer, when they donate to the Cancer Crusade," Atkins said.

Shelby Hospital Gets Priority

Kings Mountain hospital must wait until July '66 before officials can obtain federal Hill-Burton funds for a proposed $1 million hospital expansion. Administrator Grady Howard has reported.

A $3 million expansion project at Cleveland Memorial Hospital has top county priority on Hill-Burton funds so Kings Mountain's project must wait until the Cleveland Memorial project is nearly completed before Kings Mountain can hope to get the matching federal funds.

Meanwhile, Howard has been meeting with officials of the North Carolina Medical Care Commission concerning procedures toward securing the federal funds.

Kings Mountain Hospital officials hope to acquire at least 30 new beds and to relocate and expand some ancillary services. The hospital currently has a 75-bed capacity.

Architects for the expansion are Walter F. Hook Associates of Charlotte and C. L. Vaughn of Shelby.

Cleveland County voters approved a $2 million hospital bond issue in February, 1964. Cleveland Memorial received $1.5 million of the bond issue with the other $500,000 going to Kings Mountain Hospital.

Cleveland Memorial officials opened bids on their expansion project Tuesday and the apparent low bids were $127,000 above the $3,277,000 presently available for the project.

Also, the low bids do not include several add alternates which hospital officials are particularly anxious to have included.

The hospital's executive committee on Wednesday decided to delay action on the bids until their representatives had contacted officials of Duke Endowment and the Reynolds Foundation to see how much more money can be raised for the project. Local donations also will be sought.

Hospital officials have 30 days in which to accept or reject the bids.

Construction is expected to start within a few days after bids are approved and the project is expected to be completed in 18 months after construction starts.
