HOPE FOR HEARTS

QUESTION: Do children get heart disease?

ANSWER: Happily, heart attacks and strokes are extremely rare among children. However, a relatively common childhood disease, rheumatic fever, can lead to heart damage. An estimated 500,000 children in the Unites States suffer from this disease. It is important that research continue which promises to eliminate this serious heart-crippling illness.

GRASS FIRES

City firemen doused two grass fires Wednesday, one at the residence of Lawrence Davis on the Shelby Road and the other at the home of John Knight on the York Road. A small chicken house also burned at the latter.

Agriculture In Action

NO LEAF CUT Leaf growers deserve a little good fortune.

This year, they got it. For the first time in years, growers won't have to submit to a cut in production.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture, late last month, announced that poundage quotas for the 1966 flue-cured tobacco crop will remain at the 1965 level of around 1,126 million pounds.

Likewise, says USDA, the national planting allotment and average yield goal will be the same. The acreage ceiling will again be 607,335 acres, and the yield goal 1,854 pounds per acre.

North Carolina farmers might well applaud actions by USDA. The department's decisions for the 1966 crop adhere closely to the thinking of Tar Heel farmers, as expressed in the policies of the N. C. Farm Bureau.

So North Carolina farmers got what they wanted, and what they wanted was based on a lot of careful deliberation about the realities of the leaf situation.

That situation, certainly, is improving. So growers felt no need to cut production for the coming year. Up until this year, farmers had almost come to accept reductions as an inevitable annual exercise.

Announcement has now come that November sales from the stocks of Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corporation were greater than sales for the entire year of 1964. And this reflects another wise decision on the part of North Carolina farmers, who last year led the fight for an acreage-poundage program. Much of Stabilization's increased sales activity can be attributed to the program change.

For growers, though, the most novel experience is that there's no cut in store. In view of the improving situation, that would have been the unkindest cut of all.
