Telephone Talk
By R. B. MOORE

JANUARY HAS BEEN A MONTH OF IMPORTANT TELEPHONE "FIRSTS"... Probably the first time the telephone was used to help out in a public emergency was on January 15, 1878. It happened in Hartford, Connecticut where the year before, Isaac C. Smith had opened up the first experimental switchboard exchange. On the morning of the 15th, this switchboard was used to contact 21 doctors who rushed to care for victims of a train wreck near Tariffville, on the Connecticut Western Railroad. This, of course, was only the beginning. Since then, the telephone has come to be of crucial importance in emergencies, not just locally, but internationally! Now fortunately, emergencies don't happen every day, and we've come to rely on the telephone for ordinary everyday needs. Just think about your telephone a minute... what else serves you so well, so dependably, in so many different ways?

Did you know a short while back a change was made in the telephone equipment that enables anyone to call kings mountain from Gastonia and vs. without having to pay for a toll call.

Effective with the directory that was issued recently, it was necessary for the telephone company to change the number you call for information. The reason for this change was in keeping with the Bell System policy of standardizing their services for your dialing conveniences.

Please consult the informational pages in your directory for the correct numbers to dial.
