AF Announces New Program
Local Air Force Recruiting Sergeant Lowdermilk announced today that the Air Force has a new program which allows young men to enlist up to 120 days before actually reporting to active duty.

Called the Delayed Enlistment Program, this new Air Force plan gives men the opportunity of enlisting while still in high school with a guarantee of later active duty Air Force training following graduation.
Young men who are between 18 and 27 years of age are eligible to enter the Delayed Enlistment Program, according to Sgt. Lowdermilk providing that they can meet Air Force mental and physical entrance requirements.

This new program is especially advantageous to those desiring to enlist in the Air Force but who are temporarily not in a position to do so because of school status, seasonal employment, or other personal reasons, the Sergeant pointed out.

Those who enter the Air Force H Realty For Sale H

under the Delayed Enlistment Program will be called to active duty between 30 and 120 days after joining. The specific date for active duty will be mutually arrived at by enlistee and recruiter prior to enlistment. Each trainee will be guaranteed an active duty assignment in one of the four Air Force career areas of Electronics, Administration, Mechanical, or General. He will be given this guarantee further more in advance of his enlistment.

Sgt. Lowdermilk cautioned young men not to confuse the Air Force's Delayed Enlistment Program with similar sounding so-called "120 day programs" offered by other services. The Air Force program differs considerably. For example, men enrolled in the Air Force program who fail to graduate from high school on schedule, who are accepted for college enrollment, or who incur any other personal hardship prior to their reporting date for active duty may apply for immediate discharge from the Air Force. This "escape clause" is an Air Force exclusive, the Sergeant stated.

Further information may be obtained by telephoning Sergeant Lowdermilk at UX 7-7892 or by writing the Air Force Recruiting Office, 105 N. South St., Gastonia, N. C.
