ATTRACTIVE ACCESSORIES

"Before you discard an item—take a careful look at it. It may be you can transform it into an attractive accessory for your home," Mrs. Ila Grey White, home economics extension agent, Perquimans County, points out.

Here's an example. With ingenuity, elbow grease, and black paint, Mrs. Tom White of Winfall, transformed an antique sausage grinder into an attractive planter for her family room.

She covered a shoemaker's last with black paint and is using it as a smoking stand and she cleaned an old set of scales, placed them on the hearth, and uses them for fruit arrangements.

"So next time you're about to throw a similar object away, take another look. Perhaps you can transfer it into a useful and attractive household accessory," Mrs. White says.

CONGRATULATIONS, CLASS OF '66

Salutes the graduating classes of all area high schools on the accomplishments of the past, the activities of today, and the plans, hopes, and dreams of the future.

kitchen is the pride of Mrs. Ecil Griffin, Robeson County. Modern equipment and proper storage save her time and energy. Comfortable work heights and smooth production techniques allow her to prepare meals with less walking, bending, and stretching.

A broad window over the sink gives her good natural light, while semi-indirect artificial light illuminates her work surfaces with a minimum of glare and shadow.

Natural birch cabinets with copper-tone hinges and handles lend a decorative touch to the beige and yellow color scheme and exposed beams give the kitchen a charming atmosphere.

"Maximum convenience and beauty are the major ingredients in Mrs. Griffin's step-saving kitchen," Mrs. Ann W. Fall, home economics extension agent, Robeson County points out.

ARRANGE PICTURES

Mrs. Kenneth West, a homemaker in the Warne Community of Clay County, has a new family room with a lot of wall space. To decide how to arrange pictures for this wall space, Mrs. West cut shapes of the actual size picture she planned to use from brown paper. Then she arranged and re-arranged the cutouts on her wall until she got the most pleasing effect. Mrs. Ruby Corpening, Clay County home economics extension agent, reports:

A CONVENIENT KITCHEN

A comfortable and efficient

As I write this, May 23, the weather has taken a decided warming trend in all sections of the state and plants are growing real well. In our neighborhood, rainfall has been more than adequate and well distributed. Lawn mowing is a must; at least twice a week.

To keep things growing and healthy in the cut flower garden, the vegetable garden and in flower beds and borders, frequent shallow cultivation will be helpful.

Where mulches have been applied, stirring of the soil may be omitted but weeds should be pulled out. A mulch usually is sufficient for such shallow rooted plants as azaleas and rhododendrons. Keep all plants protected from insect and disease pests by following a regular spray or dust program.

Leafy vegetables, snapbeans and sweet corn may need a light side dressing of nitrogen, depending upon your soil type. Light sandy soils are more likely to show nitrogen deficiency than are the heavier types—clays and loams. Availability of all plant nutrients will be closely related to the water supply.

Gladoliis corms should be planted every two weeks for a succession of flowers during the summer months. In the vegetable garden, successive plantings of snapbeans and sweetcorn are in order in the lower Piedmont and eastern Carolina. Keep tomato plants pruned by pinching out the tender shoots as they form in the leaf axils at the base of the leaf stem.

The Department also says that failure to wear seat belts caused five of the 12 deaths last weekend alone.

Investigations of the accidents proved that failure to wear these essential safety devices were a major factor in the death list, according to Commissioner A. Pilston Godwin, Jr. Seventeen of the week's fatalities resulted from vehicles running off the road. Speed was the biggest offender.

Coin Phone
In Chrome Plating

A sparkling Bell System coin telephone — cloaked in a mirror-like chrome plating — is inviting admiring glances from New York to Seattle, while boldly resisting nicks, knocks and knives.

The chromium-plated phones have been placed in areas of concentrated telephone usage, such as airports, lobbies of commercial buildings, street corners and boardwalks. They're especially effective for installations near coastlines, where salt air wages a constant attack on less durable metals. The attractive appearance of chrome seems to fit many surroundings.

Field maintenance has been greatly reduced and very little in the way of damage to the chrome finish has been reported said R. B. Moore, local telephone manager.
