First High School

school, Mrs. Thomson relates, resulted by coincidence. The war had ended for Capt. Bell somewhere south of Edgecombe county, North Carolina, and he was traveling by foot to his Virginia home. He asked for board and bed at the plantation home of Mrs. Thomson's father. When Mr. Willeford learned that the Captain's preserve specialty was teaching, he encouraged Bell to open a school right where he was. The Captain did in a building furnished by her father. There had been no school in the area since the Civil War began in 1861. Mrs. Thomson does not relate reason for Bell's departure to Kings Mountain, but in 1880, shortly before Mrs. Thomson's birth, her parents came to Kings Mountain, where Mr. Willeford opened a retail store. It was the period in which the Old Gold Mine off York Road was productive and Kings Mountain was exhibiting the earmarks of a "gold rush" town.

As a young girl, Mrs. Thomson remembers the Captain, who transferred allegiance to Shelby in 1889, when, according to the history of Cleveland county by the late Le B. Weathers, he established Shelby Military Institute. Captain Bell, termed by Historian Weathers "a dapper Virginia gentleman", inspired intense loyalties, as has been noted by older citizens who knew him. Long after his death, a graduate shaft in his honor was erected in Shelby on grounds of the Shelby Junior high school.

James Beheler, 17, Appreciates Industrial Training Opportunity

Members of the Kings Mountain Area Industrial Association were given two big pats on the backs Thursday at their annual meeting at the Kings Mountain Country Club. "The Industrial Association is a part of me," said Beheler, who now lives in Kings Mountain after Vale and Mrs. Dudley found him a job at K Mills. "It's a nice thing and I think that if it keeps on like its going now it will be successful," he added. "The Industrial Association is a great thing in my book," said Mrs. Dudley.
