Q—Recently I received information on the new pension law and a card to fill out and return to the Veterans Administration. Must I fill out this card and return it to the VA? Must I elect to accept the new law pension?
A—You are not required to complete the card and return it to the VA or to accept the new law pension. However, it could be to your advantage to fill out the card, being certain to report all of your income, and return it to the VA. The information you submit will be examined very carefully. If you elect to accept a pension under the new law, but the VA determines that it will not be to your advantage, you will not be changed to the new law. However, once you cash a pension check payable under the new law, you cannot thereafter change your election and revert back to the old law.

Q—I was recently discharged from the Army and have applied for a certificate of eligibility from the Veterans Administration for a G.I. home loan. The home I'm interested in is still under construction and has been inspected periodically by the VA. Will the VA appraisal or guaranty of my loan constitute a guaranty as to the structural soundness of the home?

A—Neither the VA appraisal on the home nor the guaranty of your loan will constitute a guaranty that the house is properly constructed in all respects of that you will be satisfied with the home in every way. The purpose of the VA inspection is to determine only that the house is built in accordance with the plans and specifications. By law, VA may only guarantee your loan, not your home. Thus, it would be wise for you to check with people you can trust who know the home building business, if you have any questions about the house itself. VA representatives will be happy to answer any questions concerning the G. I. home loan program.

KINDS OF PROPERTY
What is real property? In a popular sense, property is anything that may be owned. It may be divided into two general classes: real property and personal property.
Real property is the term applied to land or real estate. It is property which is immovable and permanent in its character and use, such as houses and buildings, the annexed fixtures, the trees and vegetation above the soil as well as the mineral underneath its surface.
What is personal property? Personal property is movable in its nature, and includes every sort of property not possessing the nature of real property, such as furniture, merchandise, clothing, animals, promissory notes, stocks and bonds, books, patents, automobiles, and the like.
Personal property may be changed into real property, as where one takes brick and mortar — all personal property — and constructs a house with them, which is then considered real property; and if in the lapse of time that same house be razed to the ground and the building material sold as such, they again acquire the characteristics of personal property.
May one have a "property right" in the dead body of another? Yes. Although a dead body is not property in the strict sense, the right to its possession and disposition is a quasi (or "as if") property right which the courts will recognize and protect.

In the absence of a provision in a person's will, the right of preservation and burial belongs to the surviving husband or wife, or next of kin. For example, if a man dies, it is his wife who has the say as to where and how the body is to be buried. If he has no surviving wife, then this right is vested in those next of kin to him.
If there is a desecration of the grave of an ancestor, there vests in the next of kin as of the time the wrongful act is done a right to bring an action for damages.
A man residing in Maine and a man residing in Florida meet in New York. The Maine resident wants to sell to the Florida resident all of his real and personal property located in North Carolina. They want to execute the contract in New York. The law of which state will govern the transaction?
Real property can only be conveyed or disposed of in accordance with the law of the place where it is situated, while a transfer of personal property is usually governed by the law of the place where the transaction occurs.
Accordingly, the real property must be conveyed pursuant to the laws of North Carolina, and the personal property must be transferred pursuant to the laws of New York.

Weekly Health Tip
By WILSON GRIFFIN

Young men in a hurry seem to be prime candidates for heart attacks, as reported from a study of 3524 men aged 39 to 59. The man who is hard-driving, aggressive, competitive, highly ambitious, living under constant deadline pressures appears more likely to have a coronary attack than the placid, relaxed man. There must be a happy medium in this fast paced life.
After you see your doctor, bring your prescription to
