Lithium Fellows Are Named

Dr. Ricardo O. Bach, Manager of Lithium Corporation's Research Department, and Dr. Conrad W. Kamienski, Director of LCA's Organic Division recently became Fellows of the American Institute of Chemists. This honor comes to a very select group of chemists and chemical engineers (totaling between 2,000 and 3,000) and is limited to citizens of the United States.

The AIC becomes aware of new Fellows through publications, patents and other publicized activities of outstanding chemical engineers and chemists. However, before an individual is invited to join, he must be nominated and his background including "education, experience, competency and character" carefully examined and found to be of exceptionally high quality by the AIC's Qualifications Committee. The AIC's overall objective is to have chemists and chemical engineers developed and recognized as professional persons.

Dr. Bach, who resides in Gastonia with his wife Ida and their children, has been with Lithium Corporation since 1959. Dr. Kamienski joined the LCA staff in 1957. He, his wife Diane and children also live in the Gastonia area.
