Weekly Health Tip By WILSON GRIFFIN

Oily nose drops should be avoided. If the oil is inhaled into the lungs while sniffing, it can form a "pocket" in the lung tissue. There is no way for the lung to rid itself of the oily coating and so degeneration of the area sets in — surgery may finally be the only remedy. Aqueous (water soluble) nose drops avoid this risk and are preferred.

TAKING A BREATH

The terms "Sanatorium" and "Tuberculosis" have been synonymous over the years. But, what many people don't know is that sanatoriums in North Carolina are authorized to diagnose and treat nearly all respiratory diseases.

They are offering services in the treatment of diseases such as emphysema, chronic bronchitis, asthma and the like. This is being done because of the alarming rate of increase in these diseases of the past several years.

Dr. W. H. Gentry, medical director of the state sanatorium system, recently outlined services available for the detection and treatment of chronic respiratory diseases. Dr. Gentry points out that the care is provided in the sanatoriums for these patients is another tool available to the individual physician in helping patients to get the benefit of the most up-to-date treatment facilities.

Dr. Gentry says that the hospitals of the state sanatorium system are authorized to provide an admission diagnosis and evaluation workup as a routine part of all hospital admissions. Special diagnostic procedures are done when the need is indicated.

Treatment procedures available for all forms of tuberculosis and other respiratory disease include all drugs and surgical treatment, inhalation therapy, physical therapy, expert nursing care, and such special supportive services as occupational therapy, social service, vocational rehabilitation public education for children and some types of adult education.

Much of the service rendered by the sanatoriums is provided to individuals referred by physicians from rural areas and small towns where facilities for providing this scope of diagnostic and treatment service may be limited. Others are referred through local health departments and local health clinics.

According to Dr. Gentry, the average stay of persons having chronic respiratory disease is only a few weeks, during which time they get a thorough diagnostic workup and are placed on a treatment regimen designed to provide them with the maximum relief for their problem. They are returned to their physician with a medical summary including recommendations for continuing treatment at home. Patient education is stressed during the stay at the sanatorium in order to give the person some insight into his breathing problem.

Charges are based on regulations with the office of the medical directors established by the board of health. Or patients may be referred to the N. C. Sanatorium System. Admission may be arranged by phone or other contact department.
