Hands To Rock The Cradle?

Female Mountaineers may have opined on the countrywide liberation movement but at least they declined to perform locally in the strike movement led yesterday by Betty Friedan who urged women to march, demonstrate, boycott, sit-in, stop buying, stop their housework, drop the baby off at hubby's office, etc.

Or at least if they did, the Herald did not get wind of it.

In fact, we'd be far more apt to go along with the 42-year-old business executive Mrs. Jean Cordes of St. Louis who asked her sex to forego the strike called for yesterday by the National Women's Strike Coalition in favor of a "be nicer to a man day". Or we'd even endorse Mrs. Helen Andelin's suggestion that urges women to be "charming, angelic and kitten-like" and serve their husbands breakfast in bed.

Calling herself a "liberated woman", Mrs. Cordes admonishes that "you get more with sugar than vinegar". Head of the Aunt Mary Division of Lisle Ramsey Portraits, Inc., and supervisor of around 350 women in some 100 cities, she feared some of the abrasive methods and bitterness evolving from the movement may result in women becoming victims of a male backlash. She could very well be near to the truth.

Some counter-demonstrations were planned yesterday also by women who say they're liberated enough. The group, called MOM for Men Our Masters, dubbed the day "Preserve Femininity Day" and it looks like between the feminine quarrels that have grown over the movement to date it may just take a long time for any real unanimity to develop.

Overhearing a TV comment yesterday by Senator Sam Irvin that women must be ready to accept charges against them of rape, responsibility for alimony payments and many other charges generally thought of as in the male department, we believe eyebrows will raise and many will retrieve their feminine skirts to preserve what others would have you believe are archaic rights.

While we believe that women should be paid the same as men when they accomplish similar work, we also believe that some jobs are just not for women.

One thing does seem for sure—the hands that rock the cradle should belong to mama.

Some Good News

State Highway Commissioner Roy Dedmon of Shelby confirmed yesterday that survey teams and survey work is underway for a projected U.S. 74 Bypass of Kings Mountain and he anticipates the work will be complete soon.

Mr. Dedmon said as soon as the route is staked out a public hearing will be held.

The survey work has been underway about 10 days.

The Commissioner also had some other good news: The State Highway Commission on Wednesday received bids on the proposed Cansler Street project and the bids are to be reviewed by the commission at their meeting in Maggie Valley next week.

A two-day mid-planning conference on the Cansler street urban renewal project between federal, state and city officials, engineers and Kings Mountain citizens was concluded August 20th, last Wednesday, and according to Jone Laney, executive director of the Kings Mountain Redevelopment Commission, "it was a good one." He had reported, "We were able to clear numerous technical points and agreed to some changes in the initial plan for renewal of the 147-acre project area."

Welcome Home

The Herald adds its Welcome Home to the Good News Singers of America, among them four young people from Kings Mountain—Cindy Alexander, Linda Ross, Jack Bell and Leon Ross, following their trip to the Soviet Union.

Miss Alexander, daughter of Postmaster and Mrs. Charles Alexander, is giving impressions of her trip at Sunday night church services at 7:30 at First Baptist church of which she is a member.

Conductor Van Ramsey said of the 137 member group: "Every one of them acted like a little diplomat while on tour."

"And getting back to Kings Mountain was the best part of all," said Miss Ross.

If you pre-pay your city taxes for the current year during August you can earn a two percent discount.

Attend the Benefit Ice Cream Supper Sunday from 3 until 6 p.m. at Grace Methodist church. It's for a worthy cause. Proceeds will be used to buy carpets and draperies for the Junior-Senior Sunday School classrooms.

MISTAKEN IDENTIFICATION

A Townsman arriving a trifle late for last Monday's Town Board meeting got there just in time to pick up on a speech that was going...

"...mess up lawns, chase cars and children, bark at all hours, roam in packs fighting each other, dig up plants, invade privacy... It's aggravating."

Then another citizen arose to suggest muzzling. "It's been used for centuries. It's very effective."

"The suggestion for muzzling shook me," the Townsman said later. "The thing that really jolted me, though, was when the Mayor himself came flat-out for putting them on a leash."

"Then I found out they were talking about dogs. Shoot, all along I thought they'd been talking about the University students."

NERVE GAS AND CONSCIENCE

Public concern and conscience have won in the matter of the 418 concrete vaults of nerve gas. One can say this even though the effort to prevent the gas's sinking in the ocean failed. For it must be clear to anyone that the public uproar and apprehension which surrounded the affair will bring about new and radically different methods of disposal in the future.

Furthermore, the nerve gas goes far beyond its own particular and limited circumstances. The outcry — not only from many humble individuals, not only from those interested in the environment, but even from such a staunch conservative as Gov. Claude Kirk of Florida — shows how far and how swiftly concern in matters of the environment and public safety have gone.

The worry over the gas was but part and parcel of a far wider concern over many of today's challenges to a secure, pleasant, orderly life. The problems of smog, of water pollution, of noise and confusion of drugs or drink, of napalm of defoliants, of the sonic boom, and of a whole range of kindred issues is what made the deep concern over the Army's plans for the nerve gas inevitable.

What we are witnessing today is a remarkable sharpening of mankind's concern and conscience in matters touching upon life's livability on earth. One can say this even though it must be recognized that there are broad and inexcusable gaps in this concern. That at the moment men are increasingly aroused over what has happened to the physical quality of daily existence but seem to have shut their eyes to all kinds of attacks upon men's moral and spiritual outlook. Yet we are certain that, in the end, an equal concern for all of the essential aspects of men's existence — moral as well as physical, material as well as spiritual — will emerge.

Over the nerve gas is an event which can hearten everyone who recognizes the stupendous challenge to make the earth a lovelier place which faces all men and women of conscience. Time was, and not so many years ago, when an event like this would have found public opinion either uninterested or resigned. The attitude then would have been: we have to put up with it; what can we do?

THE MOVING FINGER REWRITES

One must suppose, strictly speaking, that even the earliest translators of the Bible were compelled by the transiteration from Hebrew and Greek into English, to rewrite certain passages. From time to time since then biblical scholars, both lay and clerical, have put their hands to improving the Good Book.

SHELBY WINS SAFETY AWARD

SHELBY — The N. C. State Motor Club presented its Traffic Safety Award for 1969 to the City of Shelby Thursday for having no motor-vehicle fatalities within the city limits last year.

Mayor Hubert S. Plaster and Chief of Police B. W. Lee were given a framed parchment by Jay Gragg, Charlotte division manager and Pat Blake, Cleveland County representative, on behalf of the motor club and the National Automobile Association, its affiliate.

The last traffic death prior to 1969 was recorded here on Oct. 19, 1968, giving Shelby a string of 662 deathless days as of Aug. 13 and the ninth best record in the state. Showing only three fatalities in the last three years, Shelby was one of 18 North Carolina cities and towns over 5,000 population to go through 1969 without a traffic death.

HAZARDS OF HOME

A special agency, the National Commission on Product Safety, listed 16 widely used consumer products which are safety hazards in and around the home—things like combustible television sets, rotary power mowers, soft drink bottles and high rise bicycles. But not a word about how easy it is to open the refrigerator door for a little snack.

FIX-IT TIP

Small openings in plaster can be filled with a single application of spackling compound. Using the blade almost flat against the wall, smear the compound over the crack. Then run the blade the other way, at right angles to the first stroke, to work the compound all the way into the opening. Keep wiping the excess compound off the knife and crisscrossing the patch. Make it as smooth as possible and you will have little sanding to do when it is dry.
