Tax Inequity Against Youth Bill Sought

RALEIGH, N. C. — A bill Sen. Marshall Rauch says would remove a tax inequity against young people "earning a living with one hand and pursuing an education with the other" has been introduced in the N. C. Senate.

Rep. Marcus Short of Greensboro introduced a companion measure in the House of Representatives.

Both seek to broaden an action of the 1967 General Assembly, which granted an extra exemption of $600 for each dependent in college.

Rauch and Short want the same exemption extended to young married couples engaged in both earning a living and rounding out the education of one or both of the spouses.

A couple in their forties with one child in college is eligible for the extra $600.

"However," Rauch says, "a pair of 20-year-olds with the husband in college is not eligible for the same extra $600."

"That just isn't fair. We are discriminating against those who are earning a living with one hand and pursuing an education with the other. The least we can do is to provide the same incentive we give under the old law."
