Griffin's Drug Store
Weekly Health Tip
By WILSON GRIFFIN
Each year, many people suffer from grease fires in pans. To put out a grease fire in the kitchen — smother it with a cover or inverted pan. Dump baking soda (not baking powder) on the flame. Baking soda creates carbon dioxide to smother the flames. Don't pour on water — it will cause the flame to flare up and may splatter the burning grease on you and around the room. In the absence of a fire extinguisher, a pound of baking soda is a good fire control to have handy in the kitchen.
