Unconscious because of injury or illness is usually a protective act of nature. Bystanders should NOT try to arouse the victim — no shaking, shouting, no splashing water, no smelling salts, no liquids to the mouth which might choke the unconscious person. He needs rest or he would not be unconscious. Let the victim lay flat if his face is pale—a pillow beneath head and shoulders if he is flushed. Summon medical help — meanwhile control any bleeding, and give mouth to mouth resuscitation only if breathing has stopped. Avoid moving the patient if possible.

The Emergency Employment Act of 1971, designed to place 150,000 unemployed people in jobs during the next two years, does not prohibit the re-employment of those who have been laid off regular public service jobs because of fiscal problems at the local level. It is in fact expected that many localities will rehire such employees by virtue of this act.
