Southern Living Show In Charlotte

CHARLOTTE. — George Capers Elders made his first bicycle when he was 7 years old. That was in 1899.

"It was made from second-hand parts or parts that had been thrown away," he says. "The only thing that was bought were the tires."

This talent for making anything from wood or metal was inherited from his great-grandfather who was a millwright in Spartanburg, S. C. ("A millwright was a master at anything he wanted to do," Elders says.)

And with this talent, the 79-year-old resident of Hickory makes American history come alive for school children in North Carolina's Appalachian counties.

When he was a boy of 15, Elders was fascinated with his 90-year-old grandmother's stories about "the old days." He promised her that he would build again the family's plantation which was burned during the Civil War, or failing that, he would build it in miniature.

So, remembering all she told him about the workings of the domestic machinery and the various implements used in farming on the Pacolet river, he started in 1950 to carve from wood what is now the most complete display in miniature of pioneer life in the Carolinas from 1603 through the Civil War.

The 222 pieces range from a foot-high grist mill with race and water wheel, replicas of canal boats used on the Broad river ("Broad river today is only about one-third the size it was in Revolutionary war days") and oxen-drawn wagons to a blacksmith shop with tiny tools, a school house, stables, chicken coops and household furniture of slatted chairs, lazy susan table and pottery.

All tools and equipment for processing food and cloth and all modes of transportation are represented in miniature.

"I made them all work," he comments. Then with a slight grin he adds, "You can't demonstrate anything that stands still."

Elders' display gets enthusiastic reception from students and teachers when he takes it "on tour" to schools in the Piedmont and west through the mountains. He has been as far as Murphy near the Tennessee border with it, giving 12 hour programs for seventh and eighth graders during their study unit on American history.

"When the school children see it," he says, "they almost all make 100 per cent on their work that month."

"Two things really give me pleasure. One is when a little boy comes up and says in a loud voice, 'Wow!' And the other is when a little girl says, 'Mommy, mommy, mommy, come look!'" Elders intersperses his narrative with personal glimpses of his ancestors. Listening to him is like turning pages in a history book and, in Disney-like fashion, the characters jump from the text and recreate their experiences.

He tells of his great-aunt Susan, for instance, who kept house for her father and several brothers and sisters. At meal-times, she piled everything haphazardly on the table and earned from her father not only the title of "Lazy Susan" but inspired him to create the "Lazy Susan" table. Elders, of course, has reproduced the "Lazy Susan" in miniature, a round table with a raised rotating disk in the center so everyone could serve himself. A worn photograph of his grandmother and great-aunt Susan sitting on the porch is one of his prized possessions.

"Cape," as he is called and his wife who was raised in the Episcopal orphanage in Charlotte, never had children, but both have given great measures of love and support to many nieces, nephews and school children through the years. Cape is a humble man and most grateful that his carvings can give young people a better understanding of their heritage.

The display has won many ribbons at numerous county fairs and at the State Fair in Raleigh and appeared in Charlotte area for the first time last November at the Southern Christmas show.

Elders has added 11 new pieces since November and will have the display at the Southern Living Show, February 26 through March 5 at the Merchandise Mart.

The entire collection will be shown in the Blue Ridge Heartside Crafts Association section of the show.

In addition to the abundance of crafts show visitors will enjoy 16 landscaped gardens, 20 interior design rooms, fashion shows, cooking clinics and wall-covering clinics, travel and recreation, and a mobile home pavilion.

Advance adult tickets are $2.00, at the door they will be $2.50. Students are $1.00 and children through age 11 are admitted without charge when accompanied by parents.

Show hours are 10 a. m. to 10 p. m. week days and Saturdays and noon to 6 p. m. on Sundays.

TARHEEL KITCHEN

By MISS YORK KIKER
Market Home Economist
What do these words have in common? Kedgeree, Zabaglione, Mornay. No they're not secret code names, but interesting and less familiar dishes that use eggs.

Eggs are indispensable—and they can be served in literally hundreds of ways. They may appear on the breakfast, brunch, lunch, snack or dinner menu—in plain or party fare. From an early morning eye-opener to a late-at-night snack, eggs are not only versatile and delicious but they are good for all ages, easy to prepare and economical. Speaking of economy, in checking over prices for the past 12 months eggs have averaged several cents less per dozen than in 1970. If you are looking for good buys your just can't beat eggs.

Eggs are an ideal food for people of all ages. They make a valuable contribution to the food needs of infants, children, and teenagers during the periods of rapid growth. They continue to be valuable in the daily diet through adult years. For older people, eggs assume an even greater value—they are readily available, easily digested and are continuing calories can figure that one large egg contains 80 calories—yet it supplies many of the nutrients need for a well-balanced diet.

The following recipes may not be as fancy as Kedgeree, Zabaglione or Mornay, but you will find they worth trying.

BAKED EGGS AU GRATIN IN TOAST CUPS

8 thin sliced bread
1-3 cup melted butter
8 eggs
Salt and pepper.
Cut crusts from bread. Brush bread on both sides with melted butter. Press sliced into a 3-inch muffin pans or custard cups. Toast in a moderate oven, 375 degrees F., about 5 to 10 minutes, or until very lightly browned. Reduce heat to 350 F.; break egg into the center of each toast cup. Bake eggs to firmness desired. Medium eggs take 15 to 20 minutes. Remove from muffin pans and top with nippy Cheese sauce.

NIPPY CHEESE SAUCE
1-4 cup butter (12 stick)
1-4 cup flour
Salt to taste
Dash of pepper
1 teaspoon dry mustard
2 cups milk
1 cup shredded sharp American cheese (1-4 pounds).

Melt butter in saucepan over low heat; blend in flour and seasonings. Add milk, stirring constantly. Cook and stir until sauce is smooth and thickened. Fold in cheese and stir until cheese melts. Salt to taste. Serve over baked eggs in toast cups. Yields 8 servings.

SCRAMBLED EGGS WITH SOUR CREAM

5 eggs
1-2 cup dairy sour cream
1-2 teaspoon pepper
2 tables butter
2 tablespoons chopped green onions, optional
Paprika
Parsley

Beat eggs, sour cream, salt and pepper, just until blended. Melt butter in skillet. Add onion and saute until tender. Pour in egg mixture and cook over low heat until done. Turn portions of egg mixture with spatula as it begins to thicken; do not stir and do not overcook. Garnish with paprika and Parsley. Yields 4 servings.
