RALEIGH. — The task of selecting the right style furniture for you and your family might be made simpler if you understand the three broad classifications of furniture: traditional, provincial and contemporary.

Much of the traditional furniture was first designed for royal courts and nobility in England, France and Italy, observes Mrs. Edith McGlamery, extension house furnishings specialist, N. C. State University. Through the years it has been associated with elegance and formality.

Traditional also includes those styles with design characteristics typical of master craftsmen of past generations, such as Thomas Chippendale, Robert Adams, George Hepplewhite and Thomas Sheraton.

It was only natural, the specialist says, that the court styles of each country should be copied in simplified versions for the masses.

Each of them has two qualities in common: simplicity and comfort designed for informal living.

Contemporary and its counterpart, Modern, include a broad group of designs that are adapted for modern methods of production and present day living.

Contemporary is inspired by traditional styles. Designers have borrowed these traditional characteristics, but modified and scaled them to fit today's homes.

Modern breaks completely all ties with previous designs through a series of efforts to create beauty in a functional form. This functional emphasis has stimulated production of dual-purpose furniture, modular units, wall-hung furniture and furniture scaled to fit apartment living and today's smaller homes.

"There is a wide selection of furniture available in today's marketplace," Mrs. McGlamery concedes. So you should have no difficulty selecting styles that are appropriate for your home and way of life.

Mrs. Williams' Rites Conducted

Funeral services for Mrs. Marie C. Williams, 74, were conducted Wednesday afternoon from Good Hope Presbyterian church of which she was a member, interment following in Bynum Chapel cemetery.

Mrs. Williams, of 111 N. Tracy street, died Saturday in the Kings Mountain hospital after two weeks illness.

A native of Rutherford county, she was the daughter of the late John and Samantha Alexander Carson and widow of Clarence Williams. She was a member of Pride of Kings Mountain No. Two.

She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Clista Williams Cole and Mrs. Ardatta Williams Sweat, both of Kings Mountain; two sisters, Mrs. Vennie Murray of St. Louis, Mo. and Mrs. Helen Wellmon of Bessemer City; two grandchildren and two great grandchildren.

Rev. P. L. Ross officiated at the final rites.

Plans Shaping For "Law Week"

Mayor John H. Moss has proclaimed the week beginning May 15th as "Law Enforcement Week" in Kings Mountain.

The official proclamation reads: Whereas, the City of Kings Mountain recognizes the great need for a continuing program of efficient law enforcement; and Whereas, the City of Kings Mountain is privileged to have an excellent police force; and Whereas, many members of the Police Department of the City of Kings Mountain, through extraordinary attention to their duties, and through dedication to the principles of law enforcement, and through extra service on their own time, have given more than ample evidence of their concern for the citizens of Kings Mountain; and

Whereas, many private citizens have expressed a desire to recognize the efforts of our Police Officers;

Now, therefore, I, John Henry Moss, Mayor of the City of Kings Mountain, N. C.

Education Counts

Senator Jordan has shown his dedication to the cause of education by his support of every bill which has come before the Senate providing better educational facilities and opportunities. These include benefits to schools and students at the primary, secondary and college and university levels. They include the expansion of the school lunch program; the growth of vocational education; and the college student loan and work study programs.

Senator Jordan believes that equal educational opportunities must be provided for all students without regard to their racial or economic status, and has worked unfailingly to help make this dream a reality.
