Weekly Health Tip

By WILSON GRIFFIN
Persons who are overweight have to expend more effort to walk, stand, breathe, or even to sleep than slimmer persons. This 'cost of living' for the obese shows up in higher blood pressure, faster heart rates and rapid breathing patterns, says a team of U. of Wisconsin medical researchers. Their tests with normal men weighing 165 lbs. and fat men of 300 lbs. riding a stationary bicycle showed that fat men had to work much harder to perform the same task. Excess weight not only threatens ones health and life span, but many of the pleasures of an active life are missed because the exertion is just too much to abide.
