Weekly Health Tip

Osteoporosis is a gradual weakening of bones, usually among the elderly. The bones lose their calcium content, become porous and are more likely to fracture. The need is both for more calcium, and for certain hormones to help regenerate the bones. The best preventive measure is a reasonably high calcium intake throughout life. Physicians often emphasize milk (or skim milk) and cheese, shellfish, sardines and salmon (with bones). Adequate calcium plus regular exercise should avoid loss of mineral from bones due to lack of activity.
