Ford Graveyard Proves Problem For Businessmen

Jim Lybrand and Corbett Nicholson have a cemetery problem. Mr. Lybrand purchased a tract of land fronting on Slater Street from Lester Roark, of Shelby, then sold half of the property to Mr. Nicholson. Both intended to erect business buildings there.

On the tract, however, is the old Ford family cemetery and Major Wayne Ford went to Superior Court seeking an injunc-tion against Mr. Lybrand and Nicholson to prevent their building.

The injunction hearing was conducted by Judge W. G. Mc-Lean, who, in effect, denied the petition, but granted plaintiff 30 days in which to reinstitute the petition with description of the property Plaintiff Ford sought to protect, an omission in plaintiff's original petition.

Mr. Lybrand said the amendment was filed but still without a property description of the bounds of the graveyard.

Mr. Lybrand said the property he purchased had been cleared for title for 72 years - 12 years more than the 60 years title insurance carriers require.

Terry Drum, of Gastonia, is attorney for plaintiff, while Jack White and George Thomasson are attorneys for defendants.
