CAGO Gives To Head Start

The Cleveland Association of Governmental Officials (CAGO) voted Monday night at Royal Villa here to give $1,080 to help buy office equipment for Operation Head Start at the Community Center.

In other action, CAGO gave CODAP, County Organization for Drug Abuse Prevention, $3,000 to help fund new drug prevention facilities.

CODAP, of which George Newman is director, began two years ago, requested the money in addition to the annual CAGO allotment of $5,000.

Members unanimously endorsed the state-wide bond issue, calling it another step forward in a "pay as you go" plan to put Cleveland County in position "to not have to float bonds."

Two non-member municipalities, Earl and Patterson Springs, had representatives present and reports on population were presented.

New officers for the year include Bill Campbell, president; Jack Palmer, vice president; Joe Hendrick, secretary; and Dave Windsor, treasurer.

REDEVELOPMENT Cansler street area since 1948 were constructed over a four year period by Fred Wright Jr. and James E. Rhea.

Wright and Rhea, fresh from World War II duty, convinced Frank Summers of the old First National Bank to finance their home building venture. It wasn't easy for young men from the war with nothing but enthusiasm to obtain money from stern commercial bankers.

There was a critical need for standard housing in the black community. The houses constructed at that time were among the better housing anywhere in the Kings Mountain area in the lower income ranges.

Each house was constructed of locally manufactured block and equipped with an oil-fired water heater and full plumbing facilities.

The initial rental rate was $6 per week for the four room houses and at the time of acquisition of the Wright and Rhea homes the rentals were about $7 weekly. Many tenants in this area have rented the same home for over 20 years.

The Wright-Rhea homes filled a vital need in 1948 for the low income housing. Because of deterioration of these homes and the established need for quality and adequate sized housing, these houses will go the way of other housing that has served its purpose but is no longer acceptable.

Other means of imagination and energy will be needed to again fill the existing need just as it was in other eras.
