

Writers Handbook At Library

Mauney Memorial Library has a copy of The Writers Handbook! Mrs. Hazel Fryer, librarian, said she read M-H Editor Tom McIntyre's column last week concerning the handbook and called to say a copy of the 1976 edition is available for reference in Kings Mountain.

The handbook lists markets and requirements for stories. It also contains information on whether the various magazines, periodicals and book publishers are open for unsolicited material. That means material submitted by the author and not through an accredited agent.

Also included are tips on writing and selling material.

Mrs. Fryer said the book cannot be checked out, but citizens are free to use it for reference notes at the library.

Tax Short Course Set For Area

Registration forms and a program outline are now available from the county extension office on the Farm and Small Business Income Tax short course scheduled for this area.

The short course, which is sponsored by North Carolina State University, will feature the recent changes under the Tax Reform Act of 1976.

H. W. Dameron, Cleveland county chairman, said the short course for this area of the state will be held December 1-2 at Holiday Inn No. 3 - Charlotte.

A total of five short courses will be held across the state. Two short courses of a more advanced nature will be held at Charlotte on Dec. 1-2 and at N. C. State University in Raleigh on Dec. 8-10.

Dameron said the short course will be primarily for persons who assist other people in filling out both state and federal returns for businesses and individuals.

Instructors are provided by the U. S. Department of Internal Revenue, the N. C. Department of Revenue, the Social Security Administration, and N. C. Department of Labor.

Carolyn Freeman, an accountant from Shelby, is serving as local chairman for the short course. State chairman for the courses is James G. Allgood, extension economist at NCSU.

Persons interested in attending the short course are urged to come by the county extension office, 180 S. Post Rd., or to call 482-4865 for an enrollment form.
