Briggs
Named
To Post

BOILING SPRINGS — William J. Briggs, coordinator of development, alumni, and deferred giving at Gardner-Webb College, has been named director of career planning and placement, effective July 1.

Gardner-Webb President Craven Williams announced the creation of the new office designed to assist students in making vocational decisions, and in finding employment opportunities.

"In an economy where employment opportunities are limited, particularly for liberal arts graduates, it is imperative that the college concentrate as much effort on post college career counseling as it does on charting a high school senior's career through college," he stated. "In this new post Mr. Briggs will not only be working with current students, but also with alumni who are seeking to make career changes."

In preparing graduates for the world of work, the career planning procedure will begin during the students' freshman year and be a part of the four-year educational pattern. Students will be given career-oriented tests and have opportunities to participate in various internships programs, all designed to help the student determine his most appropriate career field.

Coordinator of Gardner-Webb's development programs for the past two years, Briggs has been a member of the college administration since 1971 when he was named coordinator of student personnel services and director of student financial aid.

Briggs spent five years as dean of students and associate professor of education at Pfeiffer College. Prior to that, he was a teacher, coach and assistant principal in the Gaston County Public School System.

A native of Lincolnton, he received the B. S. in Health and Physical Education from Pfeiffer College and the M. A. in education from Western Carolina University. He is currently enrolled in doctoral studies through Nova University.

"Most of Mr. Briggs' professional career has been in student personnel and counseling services, and more recently, he has been involved in relating the college to the community," said Dr. Williams. "In this new position, he will be utilizing both skills in helping students understand their own interests and aptitudes, and relating the competencies of the Gardner-Webb graduate to the marketplace."
