

Ormand Receives WC Award

Alex Ormand, a Scout in Troop 312, of Kings Mountain, chartered by Long Creek Presbyterian Church and First Presbyterian Church has earned the World Conservation Award.

Mike Wright, District Executive for the Battleground District of the Piedmont Council, Boy Scouts of America made the announcement this week.

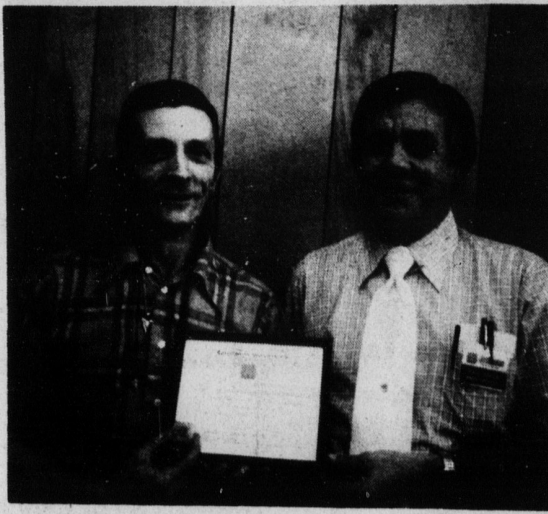

The Award is made by the World Wildlife Fund of Washington, D. C. through the Boy Scouts of America. The award recognizes achievement in environmental improvement, natural resource conservation, and an understanding of world conservation problems.

The purpose of the award is to point out to young people that countries of the world are closely interrelated through natural resources and that the United States is interdependent with the world environment.

To win this award Scout Ormand earned Conservation and Environment skill awards, and merit badges in Environmental Science, Soil and Water Conservation, Fish and Wildlife Management, and Citizenship in the World. Ormand's Scoutmaster is Leo Myers.

'Lock In' Held At Church

What it was Friday night at Second Baptist Church was a "lock in." Passersby who noticed all the automobiles at the church in the wee hours of Saturday morning will be glad to know nothing was awry. The "lock-in" was planned by young people between the ages of 12-18 and included devotionals, plenty of singing, gametime, refreshments, and recounting of favorite ghost stories before the young folk rolled into their sleeping bags and used the spacious Children's Department for slumber time.

Serving as chaperones were advisors, Evelyn and Ray Bridges and Neiman

Kell. "It was really a fun party," said youth reporter Sonya McAbee. The lock-in started at 8:30 p. m. Friday night and was officially closed at 9 a. m. on Saturday morning. Needless to report, the group's first lock-in won't be the last.

City To Spend $56,224

Little said the reason for the request is to accommodate Clevefont's plan for expansion on the present York Rd. site. He said the company plans to install about 150 new knitting machines, plus air conditioning, plus an addition to the existing structure.

"When the city extended the upgraded electrical service to Clevefont Mills about 11 months ago," Little said, "two transformers were removed and stored. These transformers can be used in the proposed new station."

"The structural steel and accessories should cost about $15,000," Little said. "The city already has a contract with Clevefont to run for five years in order for the city to recoup expenditures on improved electrical service. I recommend the city draw another contract to run for five years on this project to recover costs for the bid purchase."

The new transformer station will be located on the opposite site of the mill from the upgraded existing power source.

restrictive in its eligibility and application as other urban renewal programs.

He said beautification and upgrading of a section such as the Burlington Phenix Plant and Anvil Knit plant areas with paving, sidewalks, lighting, water, sewer and gas improvements is possible under this grant. However, he said there are other areas in the community which would be eligible for the program. Just how much money is involved as far as the city is concerned is not known at this time, according to the mayor.

However, he did say the UDAG grant is part of a $100-million program to be spread over 944 communities and that the single purpose grant is "probably covered under the $400-million three-year overall program."

The mayor said this program is not as
